Sugarloaf Becomes Historical Set For 'Tecumseh!'

By ANDI HUMPHRIES
Herald Staff Writer

From the beginning of June and throughout the summer months, the area around Sugarloaf Mountain turns into a small community. These people are gathered to bring history alive through the outdoor drama, "Tecumseh!"

For three weeks before opening, these people not only rehearse the actual order of the play, they must attend dance classes, firearms classes and even hand-to-hand combat instructions.

This is in preparation for the fifth season of the outdoor theatre, located about 30 miles south of Circleville directly inside the northern border of Ross County.

The story is based on all historical facts. Every player, whether a principal or secondary cast member, represents a factual figure from history. Each actress and actor is aware of where and how they fit into the total scene of history surrounding Tecumseh's life.

Although the casts' homes are scattered throughout the U.S., they form the hillside community by living in the area surrounding the theatre during the summer.

For the temporary living arrangements, the cast chooses from several options. If home isn't close enough, they can set up tents on the hillside, rent one of the eight cabins or live in special living quarters set up in the old hospital in Chillicothe.

Daniel Brown, playing the title role in "Tecumseh!" lives in an apartment, mainly because he wants his dog with him. He said the producer director W. L. (Rusty) Mudell does not allow the tenants of the hillside to have pets, because of the chance of them interfering with the show.

Another cast member Bruce Dickenson, who plays Simon Kenton, has lived in a trailer on the mountain throughout the winter. He kept vandals out of the theatre area, and tanded the horses.

From the audience's point of view, the living quarters on Sugarloaf are not noticeable. They are down the hill behind the sandy stage and pond area. The cabins are two-people huts containing a closet, table and two beds. In a nearby block building, the dressing room holds the tenant's shower and toilet facilities.

Also inconspicuously set behind the stage is the gun shed, prop storage building and stables for the 14 horses used during the outdoor drama.

During the three weeks of practice before opening night, cast members rely on the call board for their instructions. Every practice session is mapped out in advance.

The posted notice gives the day's schedule hour by hour. It is up to the cast to check it and be on time for practices. Failure to show up usually results in a fine.

Morning practices range from the settler dance, drills, war dance or cannon or rifle practices.

During show time, the cast and crew are kept in constant contact with the stage area by a speaker system that stems from the large tower behind the seating area.

The assistant director in the tower during the play can either instruct cast members waiting in the dressing rooms or transmit the sound from the stage.

This way, the cast knows what scenes are being played, and doesn't have to run up the hill to check on the progression of the show.

they would very likely face the same situation.

The host unit in Germany was the 36th Tactical Fighter Wing from Bitburg Air Base in Germany. They provided mess facilities, shower units, and motor pool vehicles for the 121st.

Several persons from Circleville and Pickaway County not only participated in the exercise, but had important roles in the success of the deployment.

Included in the 121st personnel were Sgt. John Carter, Sgt. Ray Yaeger, Sgt. Jim Grooms, Sgt. Ron Rock, Lt. Jim Waldeck, Sgt. Lance Harrad, Sgt. Bob Good, Lt. Col. Don Wilson, Sgt. Clark Rader, Airman Tina Britton, and Sgt. Ray Taylor.

All were busy during the working day, and we were fortunate enough to accompany some of the local persons on their duties. Unfortunately we couldn't talk with everyone while they were on the job, but they contributed in many ways to the success of Operation Coronet Whist, as the deployment was named.

Sgt. Yaeger had the job of maintenance control while on the deployment. If an aircraft developed some type of trouble, Yaeger was notified and it was then his responsibility to see that the right shop area was notified and sent to the job. In civilian life, Yaeger is the Chief of Police in Commercial Point. An accomplished marksman, Yaeger issued a friendly challenge to the German Air Force personnel that were working

Questions About Escape Remain

Capture James Earl Ray

BRUSHY MOUNTAIN, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray was run to earth early today by a brace of bloodhounds named Sandy and Little Red, ending a desperate 54½-hour flight for freedom from life in prison.

At the end of a three-hour, three-mile run through a wooded creek valley and up thickly covered mountain slopes, the assassin of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was found hiding in a pile of leaves.

Driven and exhausted, covered with mud and sand, the 49-year-old Ray offered no resistance to his captors. His first words, according to prison guard Sammy Joe Chapman, Sandy's handler and the first officer on the scene, were: "I feel good."

Chapman, 33, petted Sandy after returning with Ray and said: "She's the prettiest dog in the world." Sandy and Little Red are 14-month-old sisters.

The location was only five miles from the Brushy Mountain State Prison where Ray and six other felons escaped over a wall with a makeshift pipe ladder on Friday evening.

Two escapees — Douglas Shelton, 32, and Donald Caylor, 24 — remained at large following Ray's capture.

"We started with seven, we're down to two," said Joel Plummer, state public safety commissioner.

Two others were captured Sunday: Larry Hacker, 32, Hamilton, Ohio, serving 28 years for armed robbery and safe cracking, was the reputed ringleader of the escape; Earl Hill Jr., 34, Erwin, Tenn., convicted of murder and rape, was a former cellmate of Ray's.

Another fugitive, David Lee Powell, 27, Chicago, was recaptured Saturday. He was serving 100 years for murder.

Plummer said Gov. Ray Blanton was "extremely pleased with Ray's capture."

Blanton said earlier he had kept Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell briefed on the search and that Bell had kept President Carter informed.

Plummer said Ray's capture "concludes one of the largest manhunts in the history of Tennessee."

The capture, at 2 a.m., was reported at 2:35 a.m. and Ray was returned to the prison soon afterward in a squad car driven swiftly through the gate to the administration building.

Ray appeared tired but alert and wide-eyed. His hair was wet and matted and his clothes, a black sweatshirt and black pants, were covered with sand and mud. His face also was smeared with mud.

It was not known whether Ray had eaten during the weekend chase, said Warden Stoney Lane.

He was examined by a medic and placed in a prison hospital. Lane said this was "routine procedure."

Lane said Ray would be placed in "administrative segregation" for three days while a hearing on the escape is conducted. "It is not solitary confinement, but his movements inside the prison are sharply restricted," the warden said.

The questions linger in the James Earl Ray escape story:

—How did seven convicts get under a live electric wire that dangled less than a foot above the top of the prison wall?

—Why didn't guards in the wall towers notice the breakout in progress?

—And perhaps the most puzzling of all, how was the escape ladder, a contraption of more than 20 pieces of pipe screwed together, made in secret?

Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton's theory on the 2,300-volt cable is that the fugitives used a notch in the wall to bypass it.

Blanton said Sunday that investigators have found marks on the prison wall where it meets a rock cliff that helps form one side of the compound. There is a gap between the wall and the cliff, creating a notch that makes the wall lower at this point and provides more space beneath the cable. Investigators think the marks on the wall came from a makeshift ladder used for the escape, Blanton said.

C. Murray Henderson, corrections commissioner, said the gap apparently worsened because severe winter weather eroded the aging stone wall.

Another theory concerns a power outage at the prison. Henderson acknowledged that there was an outage the night of the escape, but he said it happened after the breakout and lasted only minutes.

The official explanation for guards failing to spot the breakout is that other prisoners collaborated with the escapees by staging a fight and other minor disturbances in the prison yard to distract the guards.

The only gunfire came from Tower 3, a wall observation post more than 150 yards across the compound. It slightly wounded Jerry Ward, the last man to make it over the wall. Ward was recaptured almost immediately.

The ladder was custom-designed for the job, with a key-shaped foot at the bottom to keep it away from the wall and an angled piece at the top that fit almost perfectly across the wall. It also could be concealed in pieces and quickly assembled.

Officials said they didn't know where the pipe came from, but one theory was that it was left over from a renovation of the 41-year-old prison several years ago.

Larry Hacker, a 32-year-old robber and safecracker, worked in the prison's plumbing plant — and so was identified by officials as the most likely creator of the ladder. But Hacker, termed a "hard core, aggressive" prisoner, did not confirm this after his recapture early Sunday. He told interrogators he was "just walking by and saw the ladder," according to Henderson, who adds that he doesn't believe Hacker.

Prison officials concede the possibility of negligence, or worse, on the part of guards.

Fuel Saving Tax Break Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, whose rejection of three White House energy proposals brought sharp criticism from President Carter, is about to decide whether businesses should get a new tax break for conserving fuel.

The panel will vote later this week on still another Carter energy proposal, one which would sharply increase U.S. oil prices and raise the cost of a gallon of gasoline by nearly eight cents.

But heading the committee's agenda today was the President's plan to give businesses a tax credit of 10 per cent of the cost of their investments in such energy-saving equipment as insulation and solar heating and cooling systems. Similar credits for homeowners and renters were approved last week.

While the Ways and Means Committee considers various energy taxes all week, the full House plans to vote on several appropriations bills for the 12 months that begin on Oct. 1.

Included are two bills that could produce the first veto of the Carter administration. The $10.2 billion public works appropriation has raised the President's ire because of congressional insistence that funding continue for 17 water projects that he opposes.

The other bill would appropriate $61.3 billion for the Departments of Labor and of Health, Education and Welfare. This bill, which carries money for numerous social programs, is about $1.4 billion above what the President requested for HEW alone.

The Senate, meanwhile, will focus its attention on foreign affairs. Votes are expected this week on bills authorizing foreign-aid spending and increasing U.S. participation in international lending organizations.

The Ways and Means Committee, which handles all tax legislation in the House, ripped apart Carter's energy-tax proposals last week. The panel rejected outright a standby gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon, which would go into effect only if conservation goals are not met, and turned down a plan for federal bonuses of up to $500 for persons who buy fuel-efficient cars.

Carter's proposed tax on cars that get poor gasoline mileage was defeated in favor of a much milder version. And another panel, the House commerce subcommittee on energy

Girl Scouts Found Slain At Camp

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — Three Girl Scouts were found beaten to death in their sleeping bags at a summer camp today, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol said.

Initial details from the scene were sketchy, and police gave no indication whether there was any suspect in the case.

The patrol said the bodies were found at Camp Scott in hilly, wooded country about two miles south of this Eastern Oklahoma community about 45 miles east of Tulsa.

The girls were reported to be 8, 9 and 10 years old. Identification was withheld until their relatives were notified.

State police said the deaths were caused by beating, but they gave no immediate indication of the weapon used or the condition of the bodies. They also declined to say who found the bodies.

Rob Pyron, press secretary to Gov. David Boren, said the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation was ordered to assist in the investigation at the request of Mayes County officers. The Highway Patrol also was investigating.

About 100 girls and 30 staff members were at the week-long camp, operated by the Magic Empire Council of Girl Scouts. The camp has been in operation since 1928.

and power, voted to remove price regulations from new natural gas, which Carter opposes.

The White House reacted quickly. Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter accused Congress of knuckling under to pressure from the oil and automobile lobbies.

He quoted Carter as saying, "The people of this country will be the ones to suffer if our hopes for an energy plan are thwarted. They will be the ones to pay for ... (Friday's) special interest victories."

In an interview Friday with magazine publishers, Carter said the public should apply pressure on Congress to counterbalance pressure from the oil and auto lobbies. "Unless the American people speak up," he said, "the special interests are going to prevail."

Ohio Air Guard Deploys To Germany For Two Weeks

"This is Libra leader on check-in with Rickenbacker tower." "Rodger Libra leader."

Those short radio transmissions, spoken in the pre-dawn hours of May 13 marked the beginning of a small but very significant part of Air Force history.

The occasion was the deployment of the 121st Tactical Fighter Wing to Ingolstadt Air Base in Bavaria, West Germany, May 13-26. The significance of the event comes from the "firsts" that were accomplished on the deployment.

The 121st was the first Air National Guard unit flying A7 D Corsairs to deploy to Europe. The Guard usually holds their summer maneuvers in Michigan.

They were also the first air guard unit to deploy to a foreign national base. Ingolstadt Air Base is maintained by the German Luftwaffe.

Ingolstadt Air Base is also a non-operational base, meaning that no flying units are stationed there. The majority of air traffic at the base comes from the Messerschmidt Aircraft Corp. testing facility adjacent to the base. Both parties use the same runways and taxiways. The fact that the 121st was on a non-operational base marked another first for the Guard.

The deployment was set up this way because should the Guard be called to active duty during the time of conflict with the Guard unit for a shooting match with German weaponry. But much to everyone's disappointment, a time slot couldn't be found when both shooters were free.

Sgt. Grooms had one very interesting afternoon in particular. He was chosen to demonstrate to the German firemen on the base how to extract a pilot from a downed plane safely. The ejection system in the A7 D fighter contains explosive charges, and a pilot or his rescuers could be seriously or fatally injured if the proper techniques are not used.

Through an interpreter, Grooms successfully instructed the firemen on how to extract the pilot. Fortunately though, their knowledge never had to be put to use.

Sgt. Harrad worked in the life support systems. He, along with the other personnel in life support, was responsible for such equipment as helmets, masks, harnesses for the pilot while in the A7, flight suits, and other such items.

The trans-Atlantic flight mandated the use of the Air Force anti-exposure suit for the pilots who were to fly the A7s. Harrad and the other life support personnel were at Rickenbacker Air Force Base the day before the pilots were launched on their flights in order to prepare the five layer suits for their survival role.

BRUSHY MOUNTAIN, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray was run to earth early today by a brace of bloodhounds named Sandy and Little Red, ending a desperate 54½-hour flight for freedom from life in prison.

Aide Gets Tough Job; Paving The Way To Cut Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is giving his newest White House assistant a task likely to become one of the most important in the administration's effort to tame and housebreak the elephant that is the federal bureaucracy.

Richard Pettigrew, whom Carter appointed assistant for government reorganization 10 days ago, says the President has given him the job of building a public constituency for reorganization — a constituency aware of "what's at stake" in the effort and ready to support it when the going gets tough.

What's at stake, says Pettigrew, is making government manageable.

The going will get tough. Pettigrew knows it. He was speaker of the Florida House and reshuffled the government there a few years ago. He knows about battles with bureaucrats and special interests and legislators with stakes in the status quo.

"There are going to be disagreements about particular plans, there's no question about that," Pettigrew said in a recent interview. "But what we're trying to do is to involve as many people as possible."

To that end, Pettigrew is arranging public hearings, seminars, conferences, committees and task forces. He's inviting counsel straight from the public — "whoever wants to supply information, make recommendations and offer solutions." Send them directly to him: 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.

People who participate in reorganization will understand it better and develop their own stake in it, he says. Then, when reorganization gets threatened by the congressional and special interest constituencies for each of the 2,000 departments, agencies, commissions, boards and committees in the government, the President can appeal to this public constituency for help.

"It's the President's conviction that and entering the secret world of Nazi headquarters in Cleveland, I spied on their activities, studied their beliefs and acted like one of them.

I gained their confidence by in order for reorganization to be successful it's going to have to be a cooperative effort with Congress, and there's going to have to be a broad-based understanding of the objectives of reorganization by the public at large, as well as the broadest possible participation in it," Pettigrew said.

Special interest groups and congressional staffs will be invited to the hearings, seminars, conferences and committees, too, Pettigrew said, "so that everybody has had their say, has had their shot in the decision-making process."

"Then, when something is recommended to Congress it can be properly represented that the best thinking that has been developed previously in the Congress has been looked at and the interest groups who feel that they are very directly affected have been consulted."

"That'll give us the best chance of a successful achievement of our goals," he said.

RFK's Son Interested In Politics

BOSTON (AP) — Joseph P. Kennedy III, eldest of the new generation of Kennedy men, appears to be on the verge of carrying on the political legacy of his father and uncles.

Kennedy, 24, son of Robert Kennedy, the New York senator who was assassinated nine years ago during the presidential primaries, says he may run next year for state treasurer of Massachusetts.

"I'm interested in it," Kennedy said in an interview. "It's an area that will have to take a leading role in the next few years in terms of the state's finances."

willingly doing menial tasks, including painting their headquarters and stuffing envelopes.

After four months I was accepted as an official member and gained their confidence to the point of becoming their official photographer. I wore a swastika armband and the brownshirt uniform of the American Nazi. I stole an inside look at the United White People's Party (UWPP) and the National Socialist Congress in Cleveland and Chicago. I wore a .38-caliber revolver while on duty at the UWPP bookstore in Cleveland, primarily to protect it from unwanted intruders.

I found myself in danger a few times. Once a .357 magnum was pointed at my head during an intraparty squabble.

I found a world that extended far beyond the common public notion of American Nazis as splintered, extreme right-wing fanatics.

Members are from every walk of life, including people aged 10 to 60, with parents actively raising their children to be Nazis.

The hard-core Nazi organizers, seeking to broaden the group's membership and clout, have adopted a political platform designed to attract the frustrated white middle-class citizen who feels that the rich have too much money and the poor get too much for free.

The party lobbies publicly against busin, integration, detente, abortion, gun control, immigration and American involvement in the Mideast, and some Nazis privately preach violence.

I first saw the Nazi bookstore in Cleveland while running a business errand. The facade promoted God (a white cross on a red field), Nation (the U.S. flag) and Race (the swastika of Nazi Germany).

Racist slogans and a telephone number for their "White Power" message were plastered on the front of the building that also serves as the UWPP national headquarters. My first visit came later and lasted less than five minutes.

An armed officer with a crew cut and blackshirt uniform watched me closely as I wandered about the room, looking at posters, magazines, books, flags and T-shirts.

Near the back of the room was a large photograph of an unforgettable

Huey Newton Sets Return To U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Black Panther Party founder Huey Newton, now 35 and living in exile in Cuba, will return to the United States to stand trial, his attorney says.

Charles Garry, home after a week-long visit with Newton in Havana, said the Black Panther leader "intends to return in a couple of weeks and stand trial."

He would not discuss reports that authorities are negotiating specifics for the return of Newton, who jumped bail in 1974 while awaiting trial for murder.

"He feels that he was railroaded," Garry said in explaining his client's flight. "His life was threatened by the so-called underworld people because of the Panthers' program against drugs. There was a contract out on him. At the same time, he felt the authorities were working hand in hand with them."

Garry said Newton was in "the picture of health. He's just beautiful. His mind is clear as a bell."

face. An autograph, written in German, translated "... for my good friend, (signed) A. Hitler."

As I looked into a dusty glass case of belt buckles, Iron Cross earrings and other trinkets, the officer asked, "Have you been involved in any other right-wing movements or are you just a World War II bug?"

I looked up, momentarily speechless. He had U.S. Army captain bars on his collar, and his nose looked like a prizefighter's.

"Is there something you're especially interested in?" he asked, tucking in his shirttail. My eyes were drawn to his tooled swastika belt and a big revolver on his hip.

I was so intimidated that I could only manage a feeble, "No, I was just curious to stop by."

I wanted to find out what went on inside the headquarters but suspected I wouldn't be able to do so. Besides, I was afraid.

But I went back later, and this time the young lieutenant on duty was more affable.

He asked for my name but quickly offered his. He was clean-cut, did not appear to be well-educated, but was friendly and likable. He also sported a full holster.

I asked what the party does, and he gave me pamphlets on Rhodesia and welfare. One was slick and clever, the work of professionals; the other was obviously a basement production, loaded with hot emotion and faulty grammar.

"We have our own press here," he said. "And once a month there's a newsletter that deals just with our upcoming events."

My face slowly became familiar to a variety of the Cleveland Nazis during the next three months. Soon I could recognize about 35 people, but I had no way then to be sure how many were in the party.

The only way to gain their confidence was by asking to become a member and by volunteering my services as a photographer. My chance came in February.

The party needed help for the upcoming National Socialist Congress, a national meeting of various Nazi groups to be held in Cleveland the last weekend that month.

"This is going to be a working congress," the captain said. "No marches or membership."

"Then can I join?" I asked.

"You could never join us wearing a beard like that," he replied. "Besides, it's tougher than you think. You have to swear an oath. You owe your allegiance to the party and the commandant."

He felt sure it wasn't in me. But next weekend I returned without my beard. I filled out my application and impressed them by saying what they wanted to hear.

I was put on a detail to paint and repair the party building for the congress — and was sworn in before supper.

Organized Labor Eyes State Issues

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — With their priority collective bargaining bill temporarily on the back burner, leaders of organized labor are ready to turn to other issues they hope to push through the General Assembly.

The public employee bargaining bill, approved without a single Republican vote in the Senate last week, will be handled cautiously in the more conservative House, with a final vote more than a month away.

But lobbyists for the Ohio AFL-CIO, probably the most powerful special interest group at the Statehouse, will not be idle.

Sen. Thomas E. Carney, D-32 Girard, is expected to introduce this week a bill that would eliminate the one-week waiting period for collection of unemployment benefits.

The waiting period, which is supposed to assure that benefits are not paid for only a few days of joblessness, has been a long standing target of labor.

Two other pieces of legislation are still in the drafting stage, according to Warren J. Smith, secretary-treasurer and chief lobbyist for the big labor union.

One bill would link the state minimum wage to federal law, building in an escalator that would trigger when Congress raises wage minimums.

A second measure would expand the scope of occupational diseases that qualify employees for worker's compensation benefits.

Smith is also lobbying hard for two major consumer bills, nearing a vote on the House floor, after being voted out of committee last week.

Pharmacists could substitute less expensive generically equivalent drugs for prescribed medication, under legislation already approved in the Senate, sponsored by Sen. Robert D. Freeman, D-29 Canton.

Rep. Mike Stinziano, D-30 Columbus, a women's rights advocate, is carrying the second labor-backed consumer bill, which would require employers to pay temporary disability benefits to pregnant women. The bill would skirt a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The AFL-CIO is pitted against formidable opposition on this one. The Ohio Chamber of Commerce is attempting to defeat it because of the cost to employers.

The chamber is also attempting to bottle up in subcommittee another labor-supported item, an omnibus "working conditions" measure, sponsored by Sen. Marigene Valiguetta, D-11 Toledo.

Miss Valiguetta, a lawmaker closely identified with labor interests, wants to restrict mandatory overtime, establish rest periods and do away with rules making distinctions between male and female employees.

Just how important the bill is to labor remains to be seen. Thus far it has failed to escape a Senate Commerce and Labor subcommittee, where a chamber lobbyist is scheduled to testify in opposition Wednesday night.

Aide Gets Tough Job; Paving The Way To Cut Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is giving his newest White House assistant a task likely to become one of the most important in the administration's effort to tame and housebreak the elephant that is the federal bureaucracy.

Richard Pettigrew, whom Carter appointed assistant for government reorganization 10 days ago, says the President has given him the job of building a public constituency for reorganization — a constituency aware of "what's at stake" in the effort and ready to support it when the going gets tough.

What's at stake, says Pettigrew, is making government manageable.

The going will get tough, Pettigrew knows it. He was speaker of the Florida House and reshuffled the government there a few years ago. He knows about battles with bureaucrats and special interests and legislators with stakes in the status quo.

"There are going to be disagreements about particular plans, there's no question about that," Pettigrew said in a recent interview. "But what we're trying to do is to involve as many people as possible."

To that end, Pettigrew is arranging public hearings, seminars, conferences, committees and task forces. He is inviting counsel straight from the public — "whoever wants to supply information, make recommendations and offer solutions." Send them directly to him: 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.

People who participate in reorganization will understand it better and develop their own stake in it, he says. NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market gained ground today, responding to signs of a letup in the recent rise of interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed about 2 points in early trading.

Gaines took an 8-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market drew some support from the belief that the Federal Reserve wasn't aiming to tighten credit any further, at least for the moment.

Last Friday morning New York's Citibank kept its prime lending rate at 6¾, changing its formula, which had called for an increase to 7 per cent.

Today's early prices included Texaco, up ¾ at 27½; Digital Equipment, ahead ¾ at 45½, and General Motors, up ¼ at 67½.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average advanced .94 to 910.97, closing out the week with a net loss of 1.44 points.

Gainers outpaced losers by about an 8-5 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 20.63 million shares, against 19.94 million on Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index picked up .18 to 53.80.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .52 at 114.55.

Prices paid to farmers by Pickaway Grain were:

Ear Corn 2.10
Shelled Corn 2.15
Wheat 2.07

A Page Of Opinion

Primitive Instinct

Popularity of the backyard barbecue has a significance deeper than party fun and tastebud tickle. The man who clips and keeps recipes on file and spends hours shopping for exotic spices and special cuts of meat isn't concerned merely with scorching a good steak.

The more advanced of the cult may also give additional loving attention to preliminary rites. He selects special vinegar to lend a soured hint of sunny orchard days. The lowly garlic clove is used to provide, as it were, a chromatic blending for the symphony of nature's gift of flavor.

Barbecuing has become a release for city man's submerged longing to regress to some more barbaric reincarnation. Every urbanite subconsciously yearns to gird lean loins with leopard skin, go forth to the hunt and prove manliness by returning with carcass of antelope slung over shoulder.

Watch the modern male fuss and blow to get the firegod stirring in a stubborn charcoal bed. Is there not visible the tiniest hint of atavistic transfiguration? There is demonstration of relativity, a telescoping that reveals timeless man, the Neanderthal linked to 20th century civilization by evolution's bridging.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Monday, June 13, the 164th day of 1977. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1956, Britain turned the Suez Canal over to Egypt after operating the waterway for 74 years.

On this date:
In 1841, the first Canadian parliament opened in Ottawa.

In 1917, General John Pershing and his headquarters staff arrived in Paris in World War I.

In 1940, Paris was declared an open city in World War II.

In 1942, the U.S. Office of War Information was created, with broadcaster and writer Elmer Davis as director.

In 1969, a withdrawal of U.S. combat troops from South Vietnam began with the pullout of a unit fighting in the Mekong Delta.

Ten years ago: U.S. Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall was nominated by President Lyndon B. Johnson to be the first black on the Supreme Court.

Five years ago: President Richard M. Nixon submitted to Congress a treaty with the Soviet Union for the limitation of nuclear arms.

One year ago: It was announced in Ethiopia that 18 military leaders and merchants had been executed on charges ranging from plotting against the government to hoarding.

Today's birthday: Former football star Red Grange is 74.

Thought for today: I don't do anything to keep my weight down because it's my weight that's keeping me down. — Irvin S. Cobb, American humorist, 1876-1944.

"The lease only says no dogs or cats!"

Presidential Vacations

By JIM BISHOP

Our chief executives will not acknowledge that a true vacation is impossible. When a president of the United States leaves Washington, the trappings of apprehension go with him.

The military aides are in attendance. So is the White House physician. There is a daily briefing on the situation of the world. The hot line to Moscow sits on an end table. State Department and congressional liaison teams phone daily reports.

Herbert Hoover was the last president to take a true holiday. He used to sit on a houseboat in the Florida Keys casting for bone fish. No officials were allowed aboard unless invited. He cooked his own breakfast.

Franklin D. Roosevelt enjoyed the waters at Warm Springs, Georgia. The world was tense, so he brought his team and his switchboard with him. He spent each morning signing White House letters.

His secretary, Bill Hassett, insisted that presidential missives should be signed with pen and ink. FDR complied. The secretary dropped each letter on the carpet to dry. The president called it "Hassett's laundry."

Harry Truman enjoyed Key West. He wore a flamboyant sports shirt, but he conducted White House business as usual and conducted press briefings. The president is "on stage" all the time.

Dwight D. Eisenhower visited his farm at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. He also liked long weekends golfing in California. For John F. Kennedy, it was the family compound at Hyannisport, Massachusetts. One of the joys of the family was to toss a political question in air, and allow every one to analyze it, tear it to shreds, and solve it.

Lyndon Johnson was the hardest worker of all. He spent more time in and out of the White House, laboring at affairs of state than the job called for. His cherished fun was to fly to Texas and sit in the kitchen with two black cooks and listen to the local gossip.

Richard Nixon was sold on Key Biscayne, Florida, by his friend Bebe Rebozo. He had three houses rigged up for any emergency, complete with guard gates and heliport. He played poor golf, didn't care for fishing. His greatest pleasure was discussing politics.

Gerald Ford made Vail, Colorado famous. He was more athletic than the others. Ski slopes became a challenge. He won a few, lost a few. He also enjoyed golf and is building a mansion at Palm Springs, California.

President Carter uses a cottage at St. Simon's Island, Georgia. It is called Grove House, an old wooden building crept over by azalea. His friend, Smith Bagley, heir to the Reynolds Tobacco corporation, owns 1,800 acres there.

Between Brunswick and Savannah, there are a group of barrier islands off the edge of Georgia. In a snobbish sense, St. Simon's could be called the wrong island. Jekyll Island - next door - used to be so laden with millionaires that President Roosevelt said that one-eighth of the world's wealth was at Jekyll in 80 families.

The so called "Golden Isles" are gifted with deep granulated beaches, thunderous green breakers and the chirp of cicadas. On St. Simon's, John and Charles Wesley, founders of the Methodist Church, built Christ Church in 1736.

Major Pierce Butler, a signer of the U.S. Constitution, ran a big slave plantation there. When Aaron Burr shot and killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel at Weehawken, N.J., he hid on St. Simon's in 1804. The Confederate Army destroyed the old lighthouse during the Civil War; it was rebuilt by the U.S. in 1971.

Today, neither Jekyll nor St. Simon's is expensive. Both have motels and museums and horse trails and golf courses. Reasonable families on reasonable budgets vacation there. Mr. Carter enjoyed the fishing and the salt air at St. Simon's long before he became president.

There's a difference. He just found out that the old, relaxed vacations are gone. A year ago it was Jimmy, Rosalynn and Amy. And a couple of suitcases.

This time it was a cavalcade of automobiles preceded by troopers on motorcycles with sirens. It was reporters, commentators and cameramen. It was aides, secretaries and specialists. It was hot lines and the U.S. Signal Corps setting up long-range radios. It was Secret Service agents and press secretaries.

Navy frogmen examined the bottom of his fishing boat before the engines were started. It was a mockery of a vacation for a man who works hard. His dear friend, Jim Bishop, was his fishing guide. The wrong one, of course

As we Americans mark the Bicentennial birthday of our flag, we honor one which symbolizes more than any other, those values and principles to which our nation has steadfastly adhered since its inception.

The Flag of the United States traces its beginnings to June 14, 1777, when delegates to the Continental Congress decided on the establishment of a national banner.

They knew exactly what they wanted, and resolved thusly: "that the flag of the United States be 13 stripes alternating red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.

The Stars and Stripes has endured as America has endured. And the colors in our flag reveal as much as anything, the secret to our success as a world power.

Red is the color of bravery, and from its very inception, our Republic has summoned forth uncommon bravery from its patriots. The greatest act of bravery may well have been the fearless declaration of rebellion by a band of American colonists in the face of overwhelming military and political odds and a future of grave uncertainty.

Certainly, many thousands of Americans have suffered and died while courageously defending our nation and its flag.

The six white stripes in Old Glory represent purity—the purity of the idealism that has motivated America's call to arms throughout our history. When we have fought, we have fought to preserve peace, to protect freedom, and to insure our own survival, and that of the Free World.

With our nation's evolution into a world leader, and certainly the world's greatest democracy, we have accepted the responsibility for defending freedom beyond our own boundaries.

We have learned, much to our sorrow, that the forces of Communist aggression have an insatiable appetite for power, which is totally compatible with their goal of world domination.

Given such unfortunate circumstances, it falls to the United States the lot of marshalling the forces of freedom to stem the tide of totalitarianism. All too often, that lot has been a lonely one.

The blue in our flag stands for loyalty — and therein lies the glue that holds our Republic together. Out of loyalty, Americans stand ready to meet any and all challenges.

Out of loyalty, Americans support their government and its leaders, while reserving the right to disagree. And out of loyalty, Americans make whatever sacrifices are necessary to keep our Republic strong and healthy.

The American flag is as much a lesson in American values as it is in American history. It has at all times symbolized the power and majesty of America, as well as its boundless humanity and generosity.

To take note of the fact that the Stars and Stripes is almost 200 years old is to realize the remarkable measure of success achieved by this Nation and those generations of its citizens who have guided and defended it successfully through periods of prosperity, depression, and peril.

We have grown from a nation of 2 million people to more than 200 million. We started with 13 loosely knit colonies, and today we have 50 unified states. Our flag reflects that amazing evolution, with each star representing a milestone of growth and progress.

More than anything, our flag sends a message to all the world that we have endured—we have persevered.

While our flag stands proudly as the standard of freedom, so stands our nation. Future generations will forever be in our debt if Old Glory waves as proudly for the next 200 years.

The sum of all the water in the world's oceans, ice fields, lakes, rivers, soils, rocks and in the atmosphere adds up to about 326 million cubic miles.

Rhodes Aide Claims Budget Unbalanced

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes' chief fiscal officer says the state budget bill being prepared by majority Democrats in the legislature is about $60 million out of balance.

Budget Director William W. Wilkins said Friday the $11.7 billion proposal includes some $30 million worth of unrealistic assumptions about state revenue made by Democrats.

In addition, Wilkins said he had cut his own projections for the two-year period beginning July 1 by $29.5 million, mainly the result of lowered expectations for earnings on state investments.

Whether Democrats accept Wilkins' analysis and trim the budget or stand by the current figures may be decided Monday night. That's when the Senate Finance Committee turns its attention to the main budget bill, having completed work earlier in the week on a budget language measure, a companion bill.

The latter bill adds $54 million in funding for primary and secondary education, with about $40 million of the increases ticketed for the basic aid equal yield formula.

That would bring the total lower education budget to $2.57 billion, a record. The bill will phase in the equal yield formula to 44 per cent of its goal next year, and 70 per cent in the second year of the biennium.

Finance Committee Chairman

Harry Meshel, D-33 Youngstown, expects to pick up $40 million to $45 million by speeding up employers' payments of withholding tax from the state income tax, a key amendment in the language bill. Ohio employers, currently given 30 days to make the payments, would get three banking days, under the bill.

The legislation, authored by Meshel, also would direct state Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson to set up a system assuring that all arms of state government use the same type of bookkeeping procedures.

The main budget will be voted out of committee before the end of the week, the finance chairman said, and go to a vote on the Senate floor the week of June 19. After that a Senate House Conference Committee will probably be needed to iron out differences between the two bodies.

That means Rhodes' request to have the budget ready for his consideration by June 20 almost certainly will not be honored. Meshel said.

Popularity of the backyard barbecue has a significance deeper than party fun and tastebud tickle. The man who clips and keeps recipes on file and spends hours shopping for exotic spices and special cuts of meat isn't concerned merely with scorching a good steak.

The more advanced of the cult may also give additional loving attention to preliminary rites. He selects special vinegar to lend a soured hint of sunny orchard days. The lowly garlic clove is used to provide, as it were, a chromatic blending for the symphony of nature's gift of flavor.

Barbecuing has become a release for city man's submerged longing to regress to some more barbaric reincarnation. Every urbanite subconsciously yearns to gird lean loins with leopard skin, go forth to the hunt and prove manliness by returning with carcass of antelope slung over

Watch the modern male fuss and blow to get the firegod stirring in a stubborn charcoal bed. Is there not visible the tiniest hint of atavistic transfiguration? There is demonstration of relativity, a telescoping that reveals timeless man, the Neanderthal linked to 20th century civilization by evolution's bridging.

Presidential Vacations

By JIM BISHOP

Our chief executives will not acknowledge that a true vacation is impossible. When a president of the United States leaves Washington, the trappings of apprehension go with him.

The military aides are in attendance. So is the White House physician. There is a daily briefing on the situation of the world. The hot line to Moscow sits on an end table. State Department and congressional liaison teams phone daily reports.

Herbert Hoover was the last president to take a true holiday. He used to sit on a houseboat in the Florida Keys casting for bone fish. No officials were allowed aboard unless invited. He cooked his own breakfast.

Franklin D. Roosevelt enjoyed the waters at Warm Springs, Georgia. The world was tense, so he brought his team and his switchboard with him. He spent each morning signing White House letters.

His secretary, Bill Hassett, insisted that presidential missives should be signed with pen and ink. FDR complied. The secretary dropped each letter on the carpet to dry. The president called it "Hassett's laundry."

Harry Truman enjoyed Key West. He wore a flamboyant sports shirt, but he conducted White House business as usual and conducted press briefings. The president is "on stage" all the time.

Dwight D. Eisenhower visited his farm at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. He also liked long weekends golfing in California. For John F. Kennedy, it was the family compound at Hyannisport, Massachusetts. One of the joys of the family was to toss a political question in air, and allow every one to analyze it, tear it to shreds, and solve it.

Lyndon Johnson was the hardest worker of all. He spent more time in and out of the White House, laboring at affairs of state than the job called for. His cherished fun was to fly to Texas and sit in the kitchen with two black cooks and listen to the local gossip.

Richard Nixon was sold on Key Biscayne, Florida, by his friend Bebe Rebozo. He had three houses rigged up for any emergency, complete with guard gates and heliport. He played poor golf, didn't care for fishing. His greatest pleasure was discussing politics.

Gerald Ford made Vail, Colorado famous. He was more athletic than the others. Ski slopes became a challenge. He won a few, lost a few. He also enjoyed golf and is building a mansion at Palm Springs, California.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Many readers write to me about their homemade diagnosis of "low blood sugar," or "hypoglycemia". It is not unusual for a medical term to capture the attention and imagination of home diagnosticians.

"I have hypoglycemia" is a flat statement made very often by patients to their doctors, without any verification that it really exists. The confusion and mystique about hypoglycemia is rising rapidly.

It seems sophisticated to say, "I have hypoglycemia," and thus explain away palpitations of the heart, fatigue, headaches, emotional upsets, tingling sensations in the fingers and the toes, inability to concentrate, hunger weakness or dizziness.

It is true that some of these symptoms occur singly or in combination in cases of true hypoglycemia. Yet they can also occur in dozens of other conditions totally unrelated to low blood sugar.

Those who speculate about this condition should know that it is a highly complex body dysfunction. There are two major types of hypoglycemia. One is associated with liver disorders, tumors of the pancreas, hormone deficiencies and adrenal gland disorders. The second type is one associated with faulty metabolism of sugar, extreme muscular exertion and poor nutrition.

There is no guesswork about this important condition. When it is suspected, the physician insists on very specific and conclusive tests of the blood sugar level that can prove or deny the existence of the disorder.

A five-hour glucose tolerance test is one of the major means by which hypoglycemia can be diagnosed. Once the condition is definitely established it can, in most instances, be kept in control.

Many people who, without proof, insist they have become involved with new-fangled fads that are fruitless, expensive and sometimes highly dangerous.

The chronic alcoholic has been offered injections of cortisone and ACTH as a cure for alcoholism and for the hypoglycemia sometimes associated with it. This is sheer exploitation and should never be embarked on in any program without the precise supervision of a doctor.

Hypoglycemia is a very real condition. It demands an exact diagnosis and consistent treatment. Hypoglycemia, however, is not a badge of distinction for those who, for some reason, want to be in the social swim of this illness.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Policemen are chasing an armed robbery suspect down the street when he reaches his home and ducks inside. May they go in after him, or must they first get a warrant?

The question involves the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "unreasonable search and seizure." And the answer of the United States Supreme Court, in considering this "hot pursuit" situation, is that the police may indeed go in without a warrant.

"The Fourth Amendment," said the Court, "does not require officers to delay an investigation if to do so would gravely endanger their lives or the lives of others."

Other exigencies too have been held to justify entry without a warrant.

In one case, police went into a house after neighbors reported that a woman inside was screaming for help. In another case, police entered an apartment after shots from the inside had been fired into the street.

In both cases the actions of the officers were approved.

Of course, these are exceptional circumstances. And the Supreme Court has warned that exceptions must be "jealously and carefully drawn" to prevent abuse.

In another case an inquisitive policeman climbed in a window and discovered an illicit still. But his only excuse for not first getting a warrant was to avoid the red tape.

Held: the entry was unlawful.

"The right of officers to thrust themselves into a home is a grave concern," said the court, "not only to the individual but to a society which chooses to dwell in freedom from surveillance. When the right of privacy must yield to the right of search is, as a rule, to be decided by a judicial officer, not by a policeman."

Advance Distribution Announced

State Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson's office reported today the first advance distribution of 1977 state motor vehicle registration fees totaling $28,769,490 to Ohio counties, cities, townships and villages. Pickaway County received $23,100.97.

Of the amount, $4,365,575 went to 80 counties and-or their municipalities that imposed an additional $5 levy on each set of license plates sold in 1977.

The counties received 47 per cent of the remainder, or $11,469,840.05, while the municipalities shared 34 per cent, or $8,297,331.10, on the basis of vehicle count.

Under the complicated formula by which motor vehicle license money is apportioned to the local political subdivisions, the counties received most of the funds, Ferguson said.

The distribution of license fees is based primarily on a formula involving the number of motor vehicles registered within a county or municipality. The big county-small county equalization factor, together with the number of county and township road miles, determine distribution.

The other $4,636,743.85 was dispensed to the counties and townships on a nine per cent county road mileage basis, a five per cent county equalization factor and a five per cent township road mileage basis.

Ferguson said under these three formulas the counties shared $2,196,325.35 on the nine per cent basis and $1,220,195.75 (each county receiving $13,865.87 in five per cent equalization funds. The 1,320 townships shared in a total of $1,220,195.75 based on the number of road miles within their borders.

Help For CBer Not All Good

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — James W. Meade of Jacksonville, Fla., called for help over his CB radio but got a bit more than he bargained for.

Meade thought he was having a heart attack Saturday when he grabbed his CB and called for assistance on the special channel reserved for emergencies.

The Highway Patrol monitored the call and sent an emergency squad which delivered the 38-year-old Meade to Van Wert Hospital.

But a routine records check revealed that Meade is wanted for a parole violation in Nevada.

Meade was listed in fair condition, with a city policeman standing guard until he can face extradition proceedings.

Reagan Already Running For President

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republicans start campaigning for president again, the new crop of candidates will find footprints on the major political trade routes. Ronald Reagan is traveling them now.

All he lacks is an election, and Reagan hasn't let that discourage him. He is touring, speaking, writing and broadcasting his brand of Republican conservatism as though the voters would be judging him next week.

It's good for the cause — and the wallet. The standard Reagan speech fee is $5,000, although he does some without charge to raise money for his political organization and, periodically, for the Republican party. He is making 13 speeches this month. He is doing daily radio broadcasts, weekly newspaper columns. Twice a month his views are featured, under his picture and over his signature, in the newsletter of his own political action committee, Citizens for the Republic.

None of this proves that Reagan will try again for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. But don't bet against it, despite his age (now 66) and his past defects in that quest (two).

And, if Reagan doesn't try again himself, the apparatus he and his allies are creating now will be there to serve the conservative of their choosing.

The old Reagan campaign organization is being tended carefully. It is knit together in two ways: through Citizens for the Republic, and through unpublishing, relatively informal meetings of 1976 campaign teams in various parts of the country.

Citizens for the Republic is out front, as the successor to Reagan's presidential campaign committee, and heir to the money he raised but didn't spend in losing the nomination to Gerald R. Ford.

The leftover campaign money comes to about $1.5 million, a healthy political endowment. Something over one-third of the money is supposed to be repaid to the Federal Treasury, but nobody has asked for it yet.

Reagan received federal matching funds for his primary election campaign, and the unused portion of the government subsidy has to be repaid. But the Federal Election Commission hasn't sent any bill yet.

"Eventually, I suppose they'll come around and say 'give us our money back,'" said Lyn Nofziger, the veteran Reagan aide who runs the organization. "Then we'll give them their money back."

In the meantime, most of it is invested in U.S. Treasury bills, drawing interest from the government until the government reclaims it.

In little more than four months, Citizens for the Republic has raised about $300,000 in new contributions, to finance its publications and build up a bankroll for political contributions. Its major mission is to work for the election of conservative Republicans, with the emphasis on next year's congressional elections.

There is no better way to build up credits for a presidential campaign than to provide money, advice and big name campaign help in an off-year election.

While it cannot be transformed back into a presidential campaign committee in 1980, it does serve to keep the campaign alive in the interim. Its 63-member steering committee reads like the roster of managers, advisers and major supporters of the 1976 Reagan campaign.

Its mailings and newsletters go to about 190,000 people who were on the Reagan campaign mailing list in 1976. About 20,000 of them have sent back contributions to the new organization.

Reagan came to Washington the other night to raise money for his outfit and two other conservative groups. They took in $50,000 or so at a $100-a-plate dinner.

"We're not a small band of ideologues trying to take over a majority," said Reagan. "In the point of belief, we are a majority ..."

He's still trying to prove it.

Legislative Report

By MYRL SHOEMAKER,
State Representative
88th House District

After 9 hearings, House Bill 319 — the Product Liability Bill — was voted out of the House Insurance, Utilities and Financial Institutions Committee with a favorable recommendation for passage.

Since House Bill 319 may be scheduled for a floor vote next week, it is timely that certain aspects of the measure be brought to light.

The use of consumerism during the past decade has been, for the most part, extremely beneficial. On the other hand, it has also caused some serious problems. In particular, it has helped contribute to a major problem in the area of product liability.

In simplified terms, product liability involves a manufacturer being held legally accountable for a product and the quality of the product.

At one time, a manufacturer who was being sued by an employee for product related injuries could use "contributory negligence" as a defense. In other words, if the current owner of the product has made significant alterations in the condition or intended use of a product, or had failed to perform a reasonable amount of maintenance, a manufacturer could use these factors as a legitimate defense.

In recent years, however, the courts have been applying, with increasing frequency, the concept of strict liability to manufacturers and product liability claims. This trend developed along with the "deep pocket" concept that the injured consumer should be compensated for his injuries, and that the manufacturer, rather than the injured consumer, was in the better position to bear the financial burden of product liability injuries. Even though a person's actions may have been a major factor in any product-related injury, an employer is protected by Workers' Compensation laws from most employee-initiated lawsuits.

All of these factors have combined to cause a dramatic increase in product liability litigation.

Testimony given before the House Insurance, Utilities and Financial Institutions Committee has revealed countless "horror stories" of manufacturers' that have settled major economic setbacks or have been threatened with total loss of their business operations due to the increasing costs of product liability insurance. Countless Ohio Manufacturers testified "... we are just a small, management owned business employing 30 people ... when our insurance costs go from $3,300 to $8,000 from 1975-1976 it hurts ..."

A specialty manufacturer stated: "... operating 'bare' as we are presently doing subjects us to a very grave personal risk. One decision against us could easily result in the loss of a business our family has nurtured for 55 years and 3 generations ... Between 1972 and 1976 our product liability premiums increased by almost 700 per cent. After many years of prompt premium payments and only one still unsettled claim for $10,000 in 1973, our coverage was cancelled without explanation ..."

Product Liability Coverage has become increasingly hard to obtain. A continuation of this trend could have disastrous consequences on both the state and national economy. H.B. 319 would create a more equitable balance between the rights of the consumer and the legitimate needs of the manufacturing industry.

H.B. 319 makes several changes in the liability law. A significant aspect of this measure is that it would prevent recovery against the manufacturer of a product where the primary cause of injury was a modification to the product made without the consent of its manufacturer. In other words this change would, to a large extent, relieve manufacturers of responsibility for certain factors over which they have no control.

H.B. 319 also addresses the issue of statute of limitations. The bill prohibits a suit for injury from a defective product, where negligent manufacture is not shown, after five years from its first sale for use. Where negligence in manufacture is proven, suit may be brought for ten years after the first sale for use. In the case of a warranty, explicitly extending to future performance of the product, suit may be brought within any longer period of limitation stated in the terms of the warranty. Exposure to toxic or carcinogenic substances defined as hazardous by OSHA is exempted from these limits.

The bill mandates that in all products liability cases, it will be a defense where there is adequate proof of an alteration of the product (not approved by the defendant), improper maintenance, misuse, or contributory negligence or an unreasonable exposure of himself to risk of injury by the plaintiff.

Under the provisions of H.B. 319, courts will be permitted to render judgments to be paid in installments for future medical expenses and anticipated loss of income, where the expected total of these items exceeds $100,000, and the parties do not object.

While H.B. 319 does not correct all the inequities that exist in the law, the bill represents a positive and necessary initial step in the field of product liability reform. The bill will serve to create a more equitable climate in Ohio for both the consumer and the manufacturer.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Policemen are chasing an armed robbery suspect down the street when he reaches his home and ducks inside. May they go in after him, or must they first get a warrant?

The question involves the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "unreasonable search and seizure." And the answer of the United States Supreme Court, in considering this "hot pursuit" situation, is that the police may indeed go in without a warrant.

"The Fourth Amendment," said the Court, "does not require officers to delay an investigation if to do so would gravely endanger their lives or the lives of others."

Other exigencies too have been held to justify entry without a warrant.

In one case, police went into a house after neighbors reported that a woman inside was screaming for help. In another case, police entered an apartment after shots from the inside had been fired into the street.

In both cases the actions of the officers were approved.

Of course, these are exceptional circumstances. And the Supreme Court has warned that exceptions must be "jealously and carefully drawn" to prevent abuse.

In another case an inquisitive policeman climbed in a window and discovered an illicit still. But his only excuse for not first getting a warrant was to avoid the red tape.

Held: the entry was unlawful.

"The right of officers to thrust themselves into a home is a grave concern," said the court, "not only to the individual but to a society which chooses to dwell in freedom from surveillance. When the right of privacy must yield to the right of search is, as a rule, to be decided by a judicial officer, not by a policeman."

Advance Distribution Announced

State Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson's office reported today the first advance distribution of 1977 state motor vehicle registration fees totaling $28,769,490 to Ohio counties, cities, townships and villages. Pickaway County received $23,100.97.

Of the amount, $4,365,575 went to 80 counties and/or their municipalities that imposed an additional $5 levy on each set of license plates sold in 1977.

The counties received 47 per cent of the remainder, or $11,469,840.05, while the municipalities shared 34 per cent, or $8,297,331.10, on the basis of vehicle count.

Under the complicated formula by which motor vehicle license money is apportioned to the local political subdivisions, the counties received most of the funds, Ferguson said.

The distribution of license fees is based primarily on a formula involving the number of motor vehicles registered within a county or municipality. The big county-small county equalization factor, together with the number of county and township road miles, determine distribution.

The other $4,636,743.85 was dispensed to the counties and townships on a nine per cent county road mileage basis, a five per cent county equalization factor and a five per cent township road mileage basis.

Ferguson said under these three formulas the counties shared $2,196,325.35 on the nine per cent basis and $1,220,195.75 (each county receiving $13,865.87 in five per cent equalization funds. The 1,320 townships shared in a total of $1,220,195.75 based on the number of road miles within their borders.

Help For CBER Not All Good

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — James W. Meade of Jacksonville, Fla., called for help over his CB radio but got a bit more than he bargained for.

Meade thought he was having a heart attack Saturday when he grabbed his CB and called for assistance on the special channel reserved for emergencies.

The Highway Patrol monitored the call and sent an emergency squad which delivered the 38-year-old Meade to Van Wert Hospital.

But a routine records check revealed that Meade is wanted for a parole violation in Nevada.

Meade was listed in fair condition, with a city policeman standing guard until he can face extradition proceedings.

Reagan Already Running For President

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Republicans start campaigning for president again, the new crop of candidates will find footprints on the major political trade routes. Ronald Reagan is traveling them now.

All he lacks is an election, and Reagan hasn't let that discourage him. He is touring, speaking, writing and broadcasting his brand of Republican conservatism as though the voters would be judging him next week.

It's good for the cause — and the wallet. The standard Reagan speech fee is $5,000, although he does some without charge to raise money for his political organization and, periodically, for the Republican party.

He is making 13 speeches this month. He is doing daily radio broadcasts, weekly newspaper columns. Twice a month his views are featured, under his picture and over his signature, in the newsletter of his own political action committee, Citizens for the Republic.

None of this proves that Reagan will try again for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. But don't bet against it, despite his age (now 66) and his past defects in that quest (two).

And, if Reagan doesn't try again himself, the apparatus he and his allies are creating now will be there to serve the conservative of their choosing.

The old Reagan campaign organization is being tended carefully. It is knit together in two ways: through Citizens for the Republic, and through unpublicized, relatively informal meetings of 1976 campaign teams in various parts of the country.

Citizens for the Republic is out front, as the successor to Reagan's presidential campaign committee, and heir to the money he raised but didn't spend in losing the nomination to Gerald R. Ford.

The leftover campaign money comes to about $1.5 million, a healthy political endowment. Something over one-third of the money is supposed to be repaid to the Federal Treasury, but nobody has asked for it yet.

Reagan received federal matching funds for his primary election campaign, and the unused portion of the government subsidy has to be repaid. But the Federal Election Commission hasn't sent any bill yet.

"Eventually, I suppose they'll come around and say 'give us our money back,'" said Lyn Nofziger, the veteran Reagan aide who runs the organization. "Then we'll give them their money back."

In the meantime, most of it is invested in U.S. Treasury bills, drawing interest from the government until the government reclaims it.

In little more than four months, Citizens for the Republic has raised about $300,000 in new contributions, to finance its publications and build up a bankroll for political contributions. Its major mission is to work for the Syrup-preserved ginger is expensive but a jar lasts a long time. It's delightful added to fresh fruit compotes. It also does wonder for canned pears; heat the pears in a little of their syrup with some grated lemon rind and top with slivers of the ginger.

"I'm homesick, Mom."
"Homesick?"
"Yeah, I'm sick of staying home."

Things are changing. Camping activities at the Y are expanding and—in the current jargon—relevant. Give us a call. Check it out. Find which of our camping programs matches the growing needs of your brood. And if your nest is empty, you can always help send a less lucky kid to camp. INSULATION SERVICE — The Flo-Foam Insulation Company, the area's newest insulation service, has already started insulating homes all over the county. The Flo-Foam Company uses foam insulation that flows into every nook and cranny where it is applied — and then rapidly hardens into a firm insulation substance. Flo-Foam offers maximum fuel economy, easy installation, fire resistance, noise reduction, and it is non-toxic. The installation of Flo-Foam will pay for itself in three to five years, and will continue to pay fuel saving dividends of more than 30 per cent of the original investment year after year. At left D.J. Humphrey and Reggie Radcliff run a quality control check on the foam. The photo at right shows Lynn Heath installing the foam. For a free estimate call 477-1441.

Gasification, Politics Mixed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sitting on Rep. Thomas J. Carney's desk is a potential piece of legislation that could ensure Ohio of the nation's first coal gasification plant.

Carney, D-71 Boardman, is a member of the Ohio Energy and Resource Development Agency. That body has been working for about two years to capture the project and has drafted the legislation which Carney has been asked to sponsor.

The bill would guarantee the Conoco Coal Development Co. that any investment it makes in building the plant, tentatively slated for Noble County, would be recovered.

Conoco recently was awarded a $21.3 million contract by the federal Energy Research and Development Administration to design the coal gasification plant.

But Conoco executives have warned the state ERDA and Carney that the Illinois Coal Gasification Group has the same contract and that the competition is fierce. Only one of the companies will be given the construction contract based upon the best designs.

J.R. Bowden, Conoco vice president, dropped a veiled threat at a recent ERDA meeting when he said that the Illinois legislature has promised an investment-guaranteeing measure for the Illinois group. He said Conoco, even if it wins the construction contract over the Illinois company, still might choose to build in another state.

"What we're trying to do," Carney said of the potential legislation, "is give some assurance to Conoco that the state of Ohio as part of its response will allow for recovery of the cost of the facility."

Under the measure, Conoco would be assured of selling the synthetic gas made in the gasification process for a price above the going price of natural gas.

The proposed plant would cost about $214 million to construct and would provide 1,000 jobs during building. The construction phase would not begin until late Spring 1979, Bowden said.

Under current Ohio law special sources of gas, as the synthetic product might be classified, can only be sold to curtailed gas customers and only if those customers are willing to buy.

Gas companies have found a small market for the so-called emergency gas and have bought and sold little.

The measure on Carney's desk would allow Conoco, through East Ohio Gas Co., to mix the high priced synthetic gas in with normal supplies. That would mean that all customers would pay a slight premium for the synthetic product.

"I don't want this bill to be used to circumvent 1213," Carney said.

House Bill 1213 is the measure which now prohibits gas companies from rolling in the cost of expensive, emergency gas to all customers.

Body Discovered In Burned Auto

HILLSBORO (AP) — Police are trying to identify the body of a woman found in the trunk of a burning car in western Highland County Friday.

Sheriff Hugh Rogers said the 1967 model car was apparently parked, doused with gasoline and set afire.

Firemen from Lynchburg discovered the body in the trunk of the car after they put the fire out, he said.

The sheriff said the body was sent to the Hamilton County morgue in Cincinnati.

Highland County Coroner Paul Terrell said he was unable to determine the victim's age or how she died because of the condition of the body.

Fun Nights End School Vandalism

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Efforts to prevent an outbreak of vandalism during the last few weeks of school in Akron were a success, a school official says.

"I'm excited because I think things really went well," said Akron Public School Supt. Conrad C. Ott, who reported only one broken window in the final three weeks of classes.

Last year, vandals were responsible for thousands of dollars worth of broken windows and damaged plumbing, and administrators were hit with eggs.

Ott said school officials greeted student spring exuberance with special activities such as "fun nights" this year rather than confrontation like last year.

Dick Celeste To Speak To Young Dems

RICHARD CELESTE

Ohio Lieutenant Governor Richard F. Celeste will be the guest speaker at the June meeting of the Pickaway County Young Democrats Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Probate Court Room.

A native of Cleveland, Celeste was elected in 1974. Since that time he has taken a strong role in attempting to shape state policy and has spoken out strongly in the areas of housing health care and fiscal responsibility in state government.

Celeste has strong concern for Senior Citizens which is reflected in his private activities as well. He was an officer and stockholder of the National Housing Corp., a Cleveland firm that builds low-cost housing for the elderly, until his election as Lt. Governor. Celeste is also active in the United Methodist Church.

New business will include discussion of election of officers for July's meeting and Meeting the Candidates in the upcoming November election.

Pickaway County Young Democrats invite friends and members of the Pickaway Democratic Party to Wednesday's meeting. A question and answer period will follow.

Crops Get Light Wetting Over Ohio

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here is the agricultural weather advisory for Ohio provided by the National Weather Service:

Crops across Ohio received some light wetting through the weekend.

A return to partly cloudy, cooler conditions occurred by Sunday evening and continues this morning.

Field Operations — High pressure centered over Hudsons Bay will keep coolness and some cloudiness over much of Ohio through Tuesday. Weak low pressure areas moving eastward across Kentucky and Tennessee may bring some light showers to the southern Ohio areas Tuesday.

Drying rates will be slow through Tuesday, but little or no delay is expected in field activity. Wetness from weekend showers is minimal with amounts mostly under 0.25 of an inch reported across the state. Evaporation losses will be under 0.15 of an inch through Tuesday, increasing on Wednesday.

Haying Outlook — Hay curing will be marginal through Tuesday, good Wednesday, then a risk of scattered wetting again by late Thursday or Friday. Any additional cuttings today or Tuesday will probably dry too slow for harvest Wednesday or Thursday.

Wheat — Ripening rates for wheat will be slowed through Tuesday from some cloudiness, cooler temperatures and higher humidity. Little or no dry-down of grain moisture in mature fields is expected until mid week.

Wetting Periods — Any wetting periods of concern for disease activation will be limited to Tuesday in southern portions of Ohio, then no further wetting until late Thursday or Friday.

Radio Club Set Thursday Meeting

The Amateur Radio Club will meet 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the third floor of the Circleville Municipal Building.

Final arrangements will be made for Field Days June 25 and 26. All members who are interested persons are encouraged to attend.

Man Loves Long Walks At Age 92

CAMPTON, Ky. (AP) — Jesse Holland's walks of at least 10 miles a day through eastern Kentucky and into other states may be a bit less than the distances he covered in younger days, but, then, Jesse is 92.

Walking seems to be something Holland never gets enough of; making moonshine, however, is. He swore that off more than a decade ago when several associates got caught.

As for drinking, Holland says he "quit over a year ago. Thought I drunk my part."

The Wolfe Countian's womanizing has abated over the years; he now spends much of his time on Angie Taulbee's front porch in Campton and occasionally gives the 57-year-old widow a friendly pinch.

But the walks go on, sometimes into Tennessee, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois or even West Virginia.

Holland, who says he will bet any man he can walk 50 miles in daylight, plans to walk 150 miles to Middletown, Ohio, in September — "if I'm not dead" — just to see if he can do it. But his departure date is not definite.

"When grandpa gets a little bit mad at any of us he'll start walking. No one knows where he goes," Mrs. Taulbee said.

Holland said he first remembers walking more than 200 miles to Nashville when he was 35. His father, who walked from Texas to settle in Campton, may have provided the inspiration.

Holland recalled that, in his 50s, he once walked to Middletown, Ohio, on crutches because his rheumatism was bothering him.

In Cincinnati, police asked him what he was doing.

"I said, 'walking.'"

They asked what was wrong with his leg.

"I said, 'not much.'"

When police told Holland they wanted him off the road, Holland said, he told them, "Then you better be inside tomorrow at nine, 'cause that's when I'm coming back through here." Walking from Kentucky farm jobs to jobs in Ohio steel mills and railroad yards, Holland often would pull his jacket over his head at night and sleep under bridges, in barns or on the roadside.

There are bad memories, too. One night in Winchester, Ky., Holland and his son were walking when a bus ran over his son and killed him.

Holland, who says he has had three wives and a dozen or so "close calls," has six children that he knows of.

One of them, whom Holland lost track of for 44 years, found him two years ago after hearing about him in nearby Madison County.

Holland says he has come to live by two rules for serious, long distance walking.

"I don't take no ride when I'm walking. When I'm awalking, I'm awalking," he says, adding, "Man ain't fit for anything if he gets filled with White Lightning."

Ohio Colleges Graduate Seniors

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Members of the class of 1977 at Ohio colleges and universities were sent into the grownup world over the weekend with talk of the energy crises, the United Nations and a joke or two.

Last Lakes Liner Up For Sale

CLEVELAND — The last of the Great Lakes passenger liners, the SS South America, is for sale at a New Jersey dock where it wallows — a faint reminder of its former glory.

The vessel has been moored in Camden for the past two and a half years, stripped of its 2,600-horsepower engine that pushed her across the Great Lakes for 53 years.

In her heyday she was known as the "Queen of the Great Lakes," but now her light blue ballroom is empty, the cream-colored cushions are gone and the faded-white wooden superstructure will be scrapped unless someone buys her.

"I would like to see her go anywhere but the shipbreaker," said Robert L. Pettegrew Jr. executive director of the South Jersey Port Corp., her present caretaker. A federal judge turned the ship over to the port authority after her previous owner failed to pay more than $10,000 in docking fees.

A Camden company had bought the ship from the Seafarers' International Union which had intended to use the vessel as a dormitory and training ship at Piney Point, Md.

She was never used as a dormitory, however, because the wooden superstructure was thought to be a fire hazard. Federal regulations against wooden ships had led to her discontinuance at a Great Lakes passenger liner as well.

Built in Ecorse, Mich., for the Chicago, Duluth & Georgian Bay Co., the South American was designed to carry 670 passengers on lake tours.

Sailors Stranded

CLEVELAND (AP) — After 12 days on the high seas the sailors aboard the Italian steel freighter Golfo di Palermo had been looking forward to shore leave in Cleveland.

Whether their interest was spurred by hearing the Randy Newman song about the city, or from being away from other entertainment is debatable.

Regardless, they were displeased at not being allowed to set foot in the city over the weekend because they lacked the proper visas.

"We are prisoners aboard our own ship," said one of the 30 sailors during a shipboard demonstration Sunday. "We wanted to see the city — to visit some of the places here," he added.

A spokesman for Capt. Mario Morin said the men were looking forward to going to church in Cleveland. "They were ready to mutiny when they found out they couldn't go ashore," the spokesman said.

Bert C. Rizzo, U.S. Immigration Service examiner, was adamant. "This is Cleveland and we enforce the law here," Rizzo told Mario Anziano, the Italian consul for Ohio and Kentucky, during a diplomatic summit at Pier 26.

Capt. Morin has asked Anziano to intervene on the sailor's behalf, explaining that he had applied for visas before the vessel left Toranto, Italy on May 24, but that the ship had to leave before the visas arrived.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, had a personal interest in the 133rd commencement at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware; his daughter Elizabeth was one of the 450 graduating seniors.

Stevens, the Republican Senate whip, said that "contrary to what some would have us believe the United States still has plentiful natural resources in the form of gas, oil and coal."

He said the natural gas from Alaska's north slope may increase domestic reserves by as much as 50 per cent.

Even so, Stevens said these resources will only "buy us the time necessary to firm up the technology to harness solar, geo-thermal, tidal and thermal energy and to make synthetic natural gas commercially viable."

Stevens pointed out that his generation has gone through crises from wars to Watergate "and yet we have faith in the systems our forefathers designed to maintain our freedoms. Our worries — at least mine — are rooted in the fear that you may not have that same faith."

At Wittenberg University, presidential energy advisor, Dr. James R. Schlesinger, told 468 graduates that the "energy garden of Eden is coming to an end." He said the "longer we delay taking major action, the more severe the consequences."

Schlesinger received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree, said dwindling supplies of gas and oil is the crux of the energy shortage.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Kent State University.

Waldheim asked the 2,000 graduating seniors to translate their idealism into support for the United Nations.

In an allusion to the killings on May 4, 1970 of four Kent State students by Ohio National Guard troops, Waldheim said the university has had its "unhappy reminder" of the best and worst in humanity.

The jokes came from syndicated columnist Art Buchwald, speaking to 2,200 graduates Bowling Green State University.

"The older world has given you a perfect world," he deadpanned. "Don't lose it up."

"One of you," he predicted, "may even find a happy marriage without taking Geritol."

"This country's going to make it. For 200 years, we've muddled through. It was less than three years ago when a president of the U.S. resigned under the darkest of clouds because he lied to the American people."

"I was at the White House that night when one president resigned and another took his place."

"I didn't see one tank or soldier... some 210 million Americans were able to change presidents overnight without one bayonet being unsheathed. And I believe any country in the world that can do that can't be all bad."

Orient Man Hurt In Cycle Crash

An Orient man suffered minor injuries when his motorcycle drove off the Darby Creek Road 2 a.m. Sunday.

James L. Hare, 33, Route 1, Orient, was referred to a doctor by Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff R. L. Phillips for scrapes and bruises he suffered in the accident.

Hare was southbound on the road, about a mile north of the Scioto Darby Road, when he went off the left side. The motorcycle struck a ditch and flipped over one time.

Dick Celeste To Speak To Young Dems

RICHARD CELESTE

Ohio Lieutenant Governor Richard F. Celeste will be the guest speaker at the June meeting of the Pickaway County Young Democrats Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Probate Court Room.

A native of Cleveland, Celeste was elected in 1974. Since that time he has taken a strong role in attempting to shape state policy and has spoken out strongly in the areas of housing health care and fiscal responsibility in state government.

Celeste has strong concern for Senior Citizens which is reflected in his private activities as well. He was an officer and stockholder of the National Housing Corp., a Cleveland firm that builds low-cost housing for the elderly, until his election as Lt. Governor. Celeste is also active in the United Methodist Church.

New business will include discussion of election of officers for July's meeting and Meeting the Candidates in the upcoming November election.

Pickaway County Young Democrats invite friends and members of the Pickaway Democratic Party to Wednesday's meeting. A question and answer period will follow.

Crops Get Light Wetting Over Ohio

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here is the agricultural weather advisory for Ohio provided by the National Weather Service:

Crops across Ohio received some light wetting through the weekend.

A return to partly cloudy, cooler conditions occurred by Sunday evening and continues this morning.

Field Operations — High pressure centered over Hudsons Bay will keep coolness and some cloudiness over much of Ohio through Tuesday. Weak low pressure areas moving eastward across Kentucky and Tennessee may bring some light showers to the southern Ohio areas Tuesday.

Drying rates will be slow through Tuesday, but little or no delay is expected in field activity. Wetness from weekend showers is minimal with amounts mostly under 0.25 of an inch reported across the state. Evaporation losses will be under 0.15 of an inch through Tuesday, increasing on Wednesday.

Haying Outlook — Hay curing will be marginal through Tuesday, good Wednesday, then a risk of scattered wetting again by late Thursday or Friday. Any additional cuttings today or Tuesday will probably dry too slow for harvest Wednesday or Thursday.

Wheat — Ripening rates for wheat will be slowed through Tuesday from some cloudiness, cooler temperatures and higher humidity. Little or no dry-down of grain moisture in mature fields is expected until mid week.

Wetting Periods — Any wetting periods of concern for disease activation will be limited to Tuesday in southern portions of Ohio, then no further wetting until late Thursday or Friday.

Radio Club Set Thursday Meeting

The Amatuer Radio Club will meet 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the third floor of the Circleville Municipal Building.

Final arrangements will be made for Field Days June 25 and 26. All members who are interested persons are encouraged to attend.

Man Loves Long Walks At Age 92

CAMPTON, Ky. (AP) — Jesse Holland's walks of at least 10 miles a day through eastern Kentucky and into other states may be a bit less than the distances he covered in younger days, but, then, Jesse is 92.

Walking seems to be something Holland never gets enough of; making moonshine, however, is. He swore that off more than a decade ago when several associates got caught.

As for drinking, Holland says he "quit over a year ago. Thought I drunk my part."

The Wolfe Countian's womanizing has abated over the years; he now spends much of his time on Angie Taulbee's front porch in Campton and occasionally gives the 57-year-old widow a friendly pinch.

But the walks go on, sometimes into Tennessee, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois or even West Virginia.

Holland, who says he will bet any man he can walk 50 miles in daylight, plans to walk 150 miles to Middletown, Ohio, in September — "if I'm not dead" — just to see if he can do it. But his departure date is not definite.

"When grandpa gets a little bit mad at any of us he'll start walking. No one knows where he goes," Mrs. Taulbee said.

Holland said he first remembers walking more than 200 miles to Nashville when he was 35. His father, who walked from Texas to settle in Campton, may have provided the inspiration.

Holland recalled that, in his 50s, he once walked to Middletown, Ohio, on crutches because his rheumatism was bothering him.

In Cincinnati, police asked him what he was doing.

"I said, 'walking.'"

They asked what was wrong with his leg.

"I said, 'not much.'"

When police told Holland they wanted him off the road, Holland said, he told them, "Then you better be inside tomorrow at nine, 'cause that's when I'm coming back through here."

Walking from Kentucky farm jobs to jobs in Ohio steel mills and railroad yards, Holland often would pull his jacket over his head at night and sleep under bridges, in barns or on the roadside.

There are bad memories, too. One night in Winchester, Ky., Holland and his son were walking when a bus ran over his son and killed him.

Holland, who says he has had three wives and a dozen or so "close calls," has six children that he knows of.

One of them, whom Holland lost track of for 44 years, found him two years ago after hearing about him in nearby Madison County.

Holland says he has come to live by two rules for serious, long distance walking.

"I don't take no ride when I'm walking. When I'm awalking, I'm awalking," he says, adding, "Man ain't fit for anything if he gets filled with White Lightning."

Ohio Colleges Graduate Seniors

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Members of the class of 1977 at Ohio colleges and universities were sent into the grownup world over the weekend with talk of the energy crises, the United Nations and a joke or two.

Last Lakes Liner Up For Sale

CLEVELAND — The last of the Great Lakes passenger liners, the SS South America, is for sale at a New Jersey dock where it wallows — a faint reminder of its former glory.

The vessel has been moored in Camden for the past two and a half years, stripped of its 2,600-horsepower engine that pushed her across the Great Lakes for 53 years.

In her heyday she was known as the "Queen of the Great Lakes," but now her light blue ballroom is empty, the cream-colored cushions are gone and the faded-white wooden superstructure will be scrapped unless someone buys her.

"I would like to see her go anywhere but the shipbreaker," said Robert L. Pettegrew Jr. executive director of the South Jersey Port Corp., her present caretaker. A federal judge turned the ship over to the port authority after her previous owner failed to pay more than $10,000 in docking fees.

A Camden company had bought the ship from the Seafarers' International Union which had intended to use the vessel as a dormitory and training ship at Piney Point, Md.

She was never used as a dormitory; however, because the wooden superstructure was thought to be a fire hazard. Federal regulations against wooden ships had led to her discontinuance at a Great Lakes passenger liner as well.

Built in Ecorse, Mich., for the Chicago, Duluth & Georgian Bay Co., the South American was designed to carry 670 passengers on lake tours.

Sailors Stranded

CLEVELAND (AP) — After 12 days on the high seas the sailors aboard the Italian steel freighter Golfo di Palermo had been looking forward to shore leave in Cleveland.

Whether their interest was spurred by hearing the Randy Newman song about the city, or from being away from other entertainment is debatable.

Regardless, they were displeased at not being allowed to set foot in the city over the weekend because they lacked the proper visas.

"We are prisoners aboard our own ship," said one of the 30 sailors during a shipboard demonstration Sunday.

"We wanted to see the city — to visit some of the places here," he added.

A spokesman for Capt. Mario Morin said the men were looking forward to going to church in Cleveland. "They were ready to mutiny when they found out they couldn't go ashore," the spokesman said.

Bert C. Rizzo, U.S. Immigration Service examiner, was adamant. "This is Cleveland and we enforce the law here," Rizzo told Mario Anziano, the Italian consul for Ohio and Kentucky, during a diplomatic summit at Pier 26.

Capt. Morin has asked Anziano to intervene on the sailor's behalf, explaining that he had applied for visas before the vessel left Toronto, Italy on May 24, but that the ship had to leave before the visas arrived.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, had a personal interest in the 133rd commencement at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware; his daughter Elizabeth was one of the 450 graduating seniors.

Stevens, the Republican Senate whip, said that "contrary to what some would have us believe the United States still has plentiful natural resources in the form of gas, oil and coal."

He said the natural gas from Alaska's north slope may increase domestic reserves by as much as 50 per cent.

Even so, Stevens said these resources will only "buy us the time necessary to firm up the technology to harness solar, geo-thermal, tidal and thermal energy and to make synthetic natural gas commercially viable."

Stevens pointed out that his generation has gone through crises from wars to Watergate "and yet we have faith in the systems our forefathers designed to maintain our freedoms. Our worries — at least mine — are rooted in the fear that you may not have that same faith."

At Wittenberg University, presidential energy advisor, Dr. James R. Schlesinger, told 468 graduates that the "energy garden of Eden is coming to an end." He said the "longer we delay taking major action, the more severe the consequences."

Schlesinger received an honorary doctor of humane letters degree, said dwindling supplies of gas and oil is the crux of the energy shortage.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim received an honorary doctor of laws degree from, Kent State University.

Waldheim asked the 2,000 graduating seniors to translate their idealism into support for the United Nations.

In an allusion to the killings on May 4, 1970 of four Kent State students by Ohio National Guard troops, Waldheim said the university has had its "unhappy reminder" of the best and worst in humanity.

The jokes came from syndicated columnist Art Buchwald, speaking to 2,200 graduates Bowling Green State University.

"The older world has given you a perfect world," he deadpanned. "Don't louse it up."

"One of you," he predicted, "may even find a happy marriage without taking Geritol."

"This country's going to make it. For 200 years, we've muddled through. It was less than three years ago when a president of the U.S. resigned under the darkest of clouds because he lied to the American people.

"I was at the White House that night when one president resigned and another took his place.

"I didn't see one tank or soldier... some 210 million Americans were able to change presidents overnight without one bayonet being unsheathed. And I believe any country in the world that can do that can't be all bad."

Orient Man Hurt In Cycle Crash

An Orient man suffered minor injuries when his motorcycle drove off the Darby Creek Road 2 a.m. Sunday.

James L. Hare, 33, Route 1, Orient, was referred to a doctor by Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff R. L. Phillips for scrapes and bruises he suffered in the accident.

Hare was southbound on the road, about a mile north of the Scioto Darby Road, when he went off the left side. The motorcycle struck a ditch and flipped over one time.

Dick Kidwell Accepts Position At Fostoria

DICK KIDWELL

Dick Kidwell, former head football coach at Teays Valley High School, has accepted a position as head coach at Fostoria High School in northern Ohio.

In nine years at Teays Valley, Kidwell posted six winning seasons, including one Columbus Metropolitan League title. The Vikings also finished second in the Metro league race three times, and were in the top 10 in their region in the final computer ranking of the season on two occasions. Kidwell took the head position when Teays Valley's high school was only a few years old, and built the football program into a respected opponent for other teams over the years.

Concerning Fostoria's football program, Kidwell stated, "I seem to have inherited a good club at Fostoria. They were 7-3 last year, and we are bringing back 19 lettermen and eight starters from last year's defense."

Fostoria competes in the Great Lakes League with five other teams, and is the only AA school in the otherwise AAA conference. At Fostoria, Kidwell will teach occupational work experience.

On leaving Teays Valley, Kidwell said, "I want to thank the people at

Cincinnati Reds

Sign 5 Players

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds have signed five more of their selections in the primary phase of the recent major league baseball draft.

The Reds announced Sunday the signing of their third choice, Kevin Mulholland, a left-handed pitcher from Patterson, N.J.

They also signed their seventh choice Tom Foley, a shortstop, from Miami, Fla.; ninth choice, Bill Kuchar, a first baseman from Hamden, Conn.; 10th-round pick Joel Willett, a right-handed pitcher from Aloha, Ore.; and 16th-round choice Roger Glynn, a lefthanded pitcher from Omaha, Neb.

All of the newly signed players will report Wednesday to the Reds farm club at Billings, Mont.

The Reds have now signed 15 players from the recent draft, including 13 of their first 17 picks in the primary phase.

Red Sox Defeat

Mud Hens Twice

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jim Burton and Allen Ripley, demoted to the Pawtucket bull pen because of control problems, redeemed themselves with back-to-back shutouts, as the Red Sox downed Toledo 1-0 and 2-0.

In other International League action Sunday, Rochester swept a doubleheader with Tidewater, winning the first game, 7-4 and taking the second, 4-2. Charleston beat Syracuse twice by scores of 6-0 and 3-2 and Richmond took two from Columbus, winning the first, 4-2 and the second, 7-3.

Reds Sweep Pair From Expos

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

"I had something to show," Cincinnati relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick said.

Eastwick gave up three runs in the top of the ninth of the first game of the Reds' doubleheader with the Montreal Expos. But Cincinnati came back in the bottom of the ninth to grab the 7-6 victory.

Then came the second game, which Cincinnati won 14-8.

"I was upset," Eastwick said of the booing by the Cincinnati fans in the first game. The boos "were an incentive — very much an incentive."

Eastwick, 2-2, hurled five shutout innings in the nightcap to gain the victory. It was his best performance of the season.

In other National League games Sunday, Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from San Diego, 6-1 and 7-4; Chicago nipped San Francisco 6-5; St. Louis downed Los Angeles 5-2; Atlanta defeated Philadelphia 5-3 and New York stopped Houston 3-1.

In the second game, the Reds exploded for 20 hits, eight for extra bases.

Dave Concepcion drove in three runs with a single and his third homer of the season, while Dan Driessen, who had three doubles, and Cesar Geronimo each had four hits.

In the opener, George Foster's ninth-inning grounder with the bases loaded scored Ed Armbrister with the winning run. Eastwick had gone into the top of the inning with a three-run lead before the Expos bounced back with two singles, a double and a sacrifice fly.

Cardinals 5, Dodgers 2
Mike Tyson had two doubles and a single, driving in three runs to power St. Louis to victory. Hector Cruz homered as the Cards pounded out 11 hits against the Dodgers, whose NL West lead over Cincinnati shrank to 7½ games, their smallest since May 2.

The Cards snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth when they erupted for three runs on four hits, chasing loser Tommy John, 6-4. Eric Rasmussen, 5-7, posted his second win in five days.

Pirates 6-7, Padres 1-4

Dave Parker's solo homer snapped a fifth-inning tie to give Pittsburgh its nightcap victory after the Pirates won the opener behind pitcher Jerry Reuss.

Reuss, 2-6, hurled his first complete game of the season, besting San Diego's Randy Jones, 4-7, last year's Cy Young Award winner.

The Pirates took a 4-1 lead in the opener by scoring four runs in the fourth inning, the big hit being a two-run single by Omar Moreno.

The second game was tied 4-4 when Parker led off the fifth with his ninth homer of the season. Pittsburgh tallied two insurance runs in the eighth on a two-run double by Moreno.

Cubs 6, Giants 5

Gene Clines scored on Bobby Murcer's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning to give Chicago a sweep of its four-game series with San Francisco. Clines singled with one out and took second on an error. Clines then moved to third on pitcher Gary Lavelle wild pickoff throw.

Three of San Francisco's runs were unearned.

Bruce Sutter, 2-1, worked the final two innings.

Braves 5, Phillies 3

A three-run homer by Jeff Burroughs in the bottom of the ninth lifted Atlanta past Philadelphia.

Burroughs' 15th homer of the season came off reliever Gene Garber, 2-4. Junior Moore and pitcher Andy Messersmith also homered for Atlanta, accounting for all of the Braves' runs. Greg Luzinski hit his 13th homer of the season for the Phils.

Mets 3, Astros 11

Len Randle scooted home with the winning run on a wild pitch to back Tom Seaver's five-hitter and give New York its ninth victory in its last 13 games.

Seaver, 7-3, struck out six and walked two in hurling his fifth complete game of the season. Floyd Bannister, 1-6, shut out the Mets through the first seven innings but threw the wild pitch to cap the Mets' two-run eighth inning.

What Next For Seattle Slew?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

If horses were like prize fighters, the air would be ringing today with grandiose plans for a knock-out, drag-out duel for racing's 3-year-old "Championship of the World."

The principals would be Seattle Slew, America's new wonder horse, and the pride of the British Isles, The Minstrel, winner of the English Derby. Pronounce it "Darby," please.

The site would be a neutral one — Paris. The event: the Arc de Triomphe, one of Europe's classics. Besides the thundering hooves of the season's most notable sophomores, the test also would match the wits of French-born Jean Cruguet, Seattle Slew's reinsman, and Lester Piggott, the leathery British veteran who rode The Minstrel to Piggott's eighth English Derby victory.

Such a race boggles the imagination, but it won't take place — not this year, at least.

"I wouldn't think of it this year," said Billy Turper, the tall, soft-spoken trainer of Seattle Slew. "It would be too much of a strain on this horse. Next year? Maybe, we'll wait and see."

Vincent O'Brien, Irish trainer of the English Derby champion, had his challenge flying across the Atlantic well before Seattle Slew destroyed seven rivals in the 1½ mile Belmont Stakes and became the 10th horse in more than 100 years of thoroughbred racing to capture the Triple Crown — the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

He became the first ever to do it without a single splotch on his record.

"I reckon we would welcome a shot at Seattle Slew in the Arc de Triomphe in September," O'Brien said with typical British restraint. "We rather think we could take him."

Seattle Slew now has won nine races in a row, without a defeat, and he's going to be permitted to munch on oats in his stall and take it easy for a while.

If anybody gets a shot at him in the near future, it will be Forego, king of the stakes winners. They say Forego is chomping at the bit to take on this young upstart, maybe in the Jockey Gold Cup or Marlboro Cup.

"It would be unfair to take Seattle Slew to Europe this soon," Turner said. "Racing over there, you know, is left to right, on grass and up and down hill. I might get Seattle Slew accustomed to racing clockwise, instead of counterclockwise, on a flat track and on dirt."

"But to try it on grass and up and down hill is unthinkable. I would have to take him to Europe and train him quite hard before subjecting him to such a task."

Some day, Turner and his bosses, Mickey and Karen Taylor and Dr. James and Sally Hill, may have to do it. This looks like a horse that belongs to the ages — and to all continents.

It would be unfair to restrict him to these particular boundaries.

29 PCC Ladies Show For Golf

In Pickaway Country Club Ladies League Thursday, 29 golfers showed up for a cold day on the course.

Royals Have Gear Stolen, Lose Shutout Tilt

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals had everything but their bats stolen from their County Stadium clubhouse early Sunday morning. But it was their bats that were most evidently missing from the Royals' attack in their game with the Brewers.

A thief — or thieves — broke into the Royals' locker room at the Milwaukee ballpark and absconded with 53 Kansas City uniforms, 20 gloves, 10 pairs of baseball shoes and 15 warmup jackets. All but seven of the Royals were forced to wear the Brewers' blue road uniforms.

To add insult to the mess, Milwaukee's Jerry Augustine shut out the Royals with a seven-hitter, 4-0.

"I did have a couple of tough situations," said Augustine, who evened his record at 7-7. "All I wanted to do was keep the ball down and make tough pitches on them, try to make them hit it on the ground so there was a chance for double plays."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox swept a doubleheader from Texas 3-2 and 2-0 to move within one-half game of first-place New York in the AL East as the Yankees were beaten 6-1 by Minnesota; Chicago topped Baltimore 6-4 in a sloppy 11-inning affair; Oakland defeated Detroit 7-1 as Vida Blue broke a personal five-game losing streak; Seattle beat Toronto 5-2 and California battered Cleveland 11-4 to give Nolan Ryan his ninth victory of the season.

Red Sox 3-2, Rangers 2-0

Cleveland in the first game and Luis Tiant in the nightcap led Boston to its sweep. Cleveland threw a seven-hitter in the opener and Boston won the game on Fred Lynn's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning. Luis Tiant hurled a three-hitter and struck out eight without walking anyone in the second game.

Twins 6, Yankees 1
Rookie right-hander Paul Thordmodsgard stopped the Yankees' four-game winning streak with a five-hitter. Thordmodsgard, 4-3, had a no-hitter through 5 1-3 innings. He was helped by two-run homers off the bats of Rod Carew and Larry Hise.

Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch is impressed by the rookie's showing thus far this season. White Sox 6, Orioles 11, 11 innings.

The White Sox made the most of the opportunities handed to them by Baltimore. Each team committed three errors, but Baltimore made two in the 11th that were decisive.

Chet Lemon's leadoff grounder in the 11th was booted by second baseman Billy Smith. Lemon, who committed an error himself that led to an Oriole run earlier in the game, then stole second and continued to third when catcher Rick Dempsey threw wildly past second. Lemon scored on a wild pitch.

A's 7, Tigers 1
Blue, 4-7, pitched a four-hitter for his first victory since May 9.

"I'll take anything the way I've been going the last few weeks," admitted the ace lefthander. "As long as we win, it's all right with me."

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2
Seattle beat its fellow expansionists for the first time behind Dick Pole's route-going six-hitter. Pole, 3-2, was helped by Jose Baez' first homer of the season and a pair of run-scoring singles by Ruppert Jones.

Angels 11, Indians 4
Joe Rudi slammed two home runs, drove in five runs and scored three as the Angels topped Cleveland. Ryan, 9-5, left in the seventh inning after striking out 10 Indians, the sixth consecutive game in which he has struck out at least 10 batters.

"I won't even think about the strikeout record until we get to September," Ryan said of his chances of breaking his single season strikeout mark of 383, set in 1973. "I'm starting to feel the strain of throwing so many pitches, which is the way I felt in 1973."

West Wins Baseball Series

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Western Ohio stars have swept a four game series from the East in the 22nd annual Ohio High School East-West All-Star baseball series at Ohio State University.

The West won 4-2 and 7-4 on Sunday after taking Saturday's games 8-3 and 5-4. The four-game sweep evened the series rivalry with 30 victories for both teams.

In Sunday's opening game, Dave Litzberg of Findlay doubled home Miamisburg's Doug Lakes in the fifth inning to break a 2-2 tie and lead the West to its victory.

The West withstood a seventh inning rally when Rocky River's Tim Kelly, Walsh Jesuit's Bob Zielinski and Nardonia's Dwight Bungo singled to load the bases with one out, but relief pitcher Dave Lochner from Beavercreek induced Brooklyn's Rick Trozano to bounce into a game ending double play.

Columbus Whitehall's Brian Hamler was the winning pitcher in the opening game while Euclid's John Leovich took the loss.

In the finale Bob Campbell of Wayne doubled home pinch runner Dan Cox of Troy in the fifth inning to give the West a 2-1 margin and the lead they never lost.

The West exploded for six runs and nine hits over the last three innings to salt away the victory for pitcher Matt Turbett of Pickerington who pitched the entire seven innings.

Most Valuable Players for the series were Jim TenEyck from Oregon Clay or the victorious West and Walsh Jesuit's Zielinski for the East.

Al Geiberger Wins Memphis Golf Clash

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Al Geiberger, emotionally and mentally drained after what he called a double victory in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic, said he faces one major problem in this week's United States Open Championship.

"The hardest thing to do will be to come back down — return to reality," the soft-spoken Geiberger said.

He had a brief, historic excursion into realms bordering unreality in this event when he shot a phenomenal, record-breaking, 13-under-par 59 in Friday's second round.

That made up the best part of his winning total of 273, 15 under par on the 7,193-yard Colonial Country Club course and, he said, put him under double pressure.

"I'm mentally worn out," he said Sunday after his back-nine rally had produced a four-under-par 32 and a three-stroke victory over South African Gary Player and chipper Jerry McGee. "It's the most emotional thing I've gone through."

"It's like there were two tournaments," said Geiberger, a 39-year-old veteran who collected $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000 for his 11th tour triumph. "It's like the 59 was something separate, by itself, and the tournament was a different thing."

"I didn't have to win the tournament even after shooting the 59. And for a while, it looked like I wasn't going to."

He paused briefly and that shy smile crossed his face.

"It makes a lot better story this way," he said. "You know, in telling it later — and I'm sure I'm going to be telling it a lot of times — it'd be awful to say I shot 59 and then blew the tournament. This makes it a lot better."

It was far from being easy and it certainly wasn't comfortable, in temperatures that soared into the upper 90s and sent first aid personnel scurrying to the help of more than a dozen spectators who collapsed in the sweltering heat.

Player shot a final 69 for 276. He was tied by McGee, who birdied the last hole for a 67 that clinched him a spot on the American Ryder Cup team.

North Teams Wins All-Star Cage Tilts

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The coaches of both winning teams in the Ohio high school North-South Basketball Classic said they were pleased with the way the all-stars played together Saturday night.

"For an all-star game, we did a lot of things we wanted to do," Rich Voiers of Bay Village said after his Class AAA North squad thumped the South 101-92.

"They did what we like to do," they just complemented each other," said Lee Himmeger of Defiance Ayersville of the performance of his Class A-AA North team in whipping the South 105-90.

It was the first time the annual classic has been played in Canton, having been moved here from Marion, where it was held the previous 13 years, and a crowd of 3,508 was on hand to see the North sweep both ends of the doubleheader.

Afterward, Jim Rhoden of Lebanon, who scored 27 points for the South, and Bob Lowrie of state champion Cleveland Cathedral Latin, with 14 points for the North, received the Most Valuable Player awards for the AAA and A-AA games, respectively.

But Rhoden's individual heroics in the Class AAA contest failed to stem the onslaught of the North team which put six players in double figures, led by hometown favorite Dennis Winn of Canton Timken, who scored 14.

Winn and Mike Flynn of Massillon Perry led the North in a second-quarter comeback to wipe out the Rebels' 23-17 first quarter margin.

Gary Massa of Cincinnati St. Xavier scored 18 for the South and Chris Frangia, a 5-foot-6 point man from Newark who was a last minute replacement, added 10.

Richard Montague of Elyria, John Flowers of Sylvania Southview, near Toledo, and Mike Nicholls of Galion each had a dozen points for the North. Teammates Vince Brookins of Cleveland Collinwood had 11 and Carter Scott of Barborton had 10.

In the Class A-AA clash, Lowrie was joined by three other North players in hitting 14 points each. They were Guy Neal of Wellington, Dave Olinger of West Lafayette Ridgewood and Jim Hoops of Hamler Patrick Henry.

The South was led by Marquis Miller, the 6-foot-6 wizard from Columbus St. Charles, with a game-high 19 points. Coy Prater of Richmond Dale Southeastern had 12 and Eddie Crowe of Carlisle hit 11.

The North trailed for the first half of the first quarter, but then exploded for a 57-52 half-time edge and rolled to an 85-57 margin after three periods.

Muldowney Victorious In Drags

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Shirley Muldowney explains her sudden success—three major victories in the last 13 months of National Hot Rod Association's top fuel competition—in one word.

"Money," said the 36-year-old professional driver Sunday, rubbing her fingers together moments after she had won her second successive NHRA Springnationals.

"In 1973, I just didn't have any equipment to work with. We were the runnerup in 1975 and we didn't have anything to work with. We killed 'em last year with very, very little money."

"The money went up this year. Sponsors are hard to come by. Other forms of racing bite us, but I could care less if I ever go around circles."

Mrs. Muldowney, from Mount Clemens, Mich., the only woman in top fuel eliminator, swept by male rivals Frank Bradley, Jeg Coughlin, Don Garlits and Clive Skilton, the first Briton ever to qualify in NHRA nationals.

"Garlits was in a good mood today. He was a sweetheart—until he got beat," she said. The winningest NHRA top fuel pilot lost an engine trying to oust Shirley.

The other major winners at National Trail Raceway were a study in contrast.

Fifty-year-old Don Nicholson of Atlanta won the pro stock competition in his 1977 Mustang, his second major NHRA triumph this year.

Bob Pickett, 36, a nonwinner in two decades of nationals, stunned his Grandad Hills, Calif., neighbor, Don Prudhomme, for the funny car title.

Moses Victorious In AAU Track Meet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hurdler Edwin Moses might have been nudged out of the limelight if Dwight Stones had been successful at one of his last three high jump attempts. But as it turned out, Moses was the man of the meet at the National AAU Track & Field Championships.

A quiet and studious physics major at Atlanta's Morehouse College, Moses even did a little showboating, laughing and throwing buttons bearing his picture into the stands as he took a victory lap.

His jubilation was warranted.

Moses, who had set a world record in winning the Olympic gold medal in the 400-meter hurdles at Montreal, rewrote the mark Saturday, the final day of the three-day AAU meet at UCLA.

In a race that was supposed to be close between Moses and NCAA champion Tom Andrews, Moses won by 10 meters. He was timed in 47.45 seconds, bettering his earlier world standard of 47.64. Andrews finished second in 49.03.

Luis Tiant hurled a three-hitter and struck out eight without walking anyone in the second game.

Twins 6, Yankees 1
Rookie right-hander Paul Thormodsgard stopped the Yankees' four-game winning streak with a five-hitter. Thormodsgard, 4-3, had a no-hitter through 5 1-3 innings. He was helped by two-run homers off the bats of Rod Carew and Larry Hise.

Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch is impressed by the rookie's showing thus far this season. White Sox 6, Orioles 4, 11 innings.

The White Sox made the most of the opportunities handed to them by Baltimore. Each team committed three errors, but Baltimore made two in the 11th that were decisive.

Chet Lemon's leadoff grounder in the 11th was booted by second baseman Billy Smith. Lemon, who committed an error himself that led to an Oriole run earlier in the game, then stole second and continued to third when catcher Rick Dempsey threw wildly past second. Lemon scored on a wild pitch.

A's 7, Tigers 1
Blue, 4-7, pitched a four-hitter for his first victory since May 9.

"I'll take anything the way I've been going the last few weeks," admitted the ace lefthander. "As long as we win, it's all right with me."

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2
Seattle beat its fellow expansionists for the first time behind Dick Pole's route-going six-hitter. Pole, 3-2, was helped by Jose Baez' first homer of the season and a pair of run-scoring singles by Ruppert Jones.

Angels 11, Indians 4
Joe Rudi slammed two home runs, drove in five runs and scored three as the Angels topped Cleveland. Ryan, 9-5, left in the seventh inning after striking out 10 Indians, the sixth consecutive game in which he has struck out at least 10 batters.

"I won't even think about the strikeout record until we get to September," Ryan said of his chances of breaking his single season strikeout mark of 383, set in 1973. "I'm starting to feel the strain of throwing so many pitches, which is the way I felt in 1973."

West Wins Baseball Series

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Western Ohio stars have swept a four game series from the East in the 22nd annual Ohio High School East-West All-Star baseball series at Ohio State University.

The West won 4-2 and 7-4 on Sunday after taking Saturday's games 8-3 and 5-4. The four-game sweep evened the series rivalry with 30 victories for both teams.

In Sunday's opening game, Dave Litzenberg of Findlay doubled home Miamisburg's Doug Lakes in the fifth inning to break a 2-2 tie and lead the West to its victory.

The West withstood a seventh-inning rally when Rocky River's Tim Kelly, Walsh Jesuit's Bob Zielinski and Nordinia's Dwight Bungo singled to load the bases with one out, but relief pitcher Dave Lochner from Beavercreek induced Brooklyn's Rick Trozano to bounce into a game ending double play.

Columbus Whitehall's Brian Hamler was the winning pitcher in the opening game while Euclid's John Leovich took the loss.

In the finale Bob Campbell of Wayne doubled home pinch runner Dan Cox of Troy in the fifth inning to give the West a 2-1 margin and the lead they never lost.

The West exploded for six runs and nine hits over the last three innings to salt away the victory for pitcher Matt Turbett of Pickerington who pitched the entire seven innings.

Most Valuable Players for the series were Jim TenEyck from Oregon Clay for the victorious West and Walsh Jesuit's Zielinski for the East.

Al Geiberger Wins Memphis Golf Clash

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Al Geiberger, emotionally and mentally drained after what he called a double victory in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic, said he faces one major problem in this week's United States Open Championship.

"The hardest thing to do will be to come back down — return to reality," the soft-spoken Geiberger said.

He had a brief, historic excursion into realms bordering unreality in this event when he shot a phenomenal, record-breaking, 13-under-par 59 in Friday's second round.

That made up the best part of his winning total of 273, 15 under par on the 7,193-yard Colonial Country Club course and, he said, put him under double pressure.

"I'm mentally worn out," he said Sunday after his back-nine rally had produced a four-under-par 32 and a three-stroke victory over South African Gary Player and chipper Jerry McGee. "It's the most emotional thing I've gone through."

"It's like there were two tournaments," said Geiberger, a 39-year-old veteran who collected $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000 for his 11th

tour triumph. "It's like the 59 was something separate, by itself, and the tournament was a different thing."

"I didn't have to win the tournament even after shooting the 59. And for a while, it looked like I wasn't going to."

He paused briefly and that shy smile crossed his face.

"It makes a lot better story this way," he said. "You know, in telling it later — and I'm sure I'm going to be telling it a lot of times — it'd be awful to say I shot 59 and then blew the tournament. This makes it a lot better."

It was far from being easy and it certainly wasn't comfortable, in temperatures that soared into the upper 90s and sent first aid personnel scurrying to the help of more than a dozen spectators who collapsed in the sweltering heat.

Player shot a final 69 for 276. He was tied by McGee, who birdied the last hole for a 67 that clinched him a spot on the American Ryder Cup team.

North Teams Wins All-Star Cage Tilts

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The coaches of both winning teams in the Ohio high school North-South Basketball Classic said they were pleased with the way the all-stars played together Saturday night.

"For an all-star game, we did a lot of things we wanted to do," Rich Voiers of Bay Village said after his Class AAA North squad thumped the South 101-92.

"They did what we like to do; they just complemented each other," said Lee Himmeger of Defiance Ayersville of the performance of his Class A-AA North team in whipping the South 105-90.

It was the first time the annual classic has been played in Canton, having been moved here from Marion, where it was held the previous 13 years, and a crowd of 3,508 was on hand to see the North sweep both ends of the doubleheader.

Afterward, Jim Rhoden of Lebanon, who scored 27 points for the South, and Bob Lowrie of state champion Cleveland Cathedral Latin, with 14 points for the North, received the Most Valuable Player awards for the AAA and A-AA games, respectively.

But Rhoden's individual heroics in the Class AAA contest failed to stem the onslaught of the North team which put six players in double figures, led by hometown favorite Dennis Winn of Canton Timken, who scored 14.

Winn and Mike Flynn of Massillon Perry led the North in a second-quarter comeback to wipe out the Rebels' 23-17 first quarter margin.

Gary Massa of Cincinnati St. Xavier scored 18 for the South and Chris Frangia, a 5-foot-6 point man from Newark who was a last minute replacement, added 10.

Richard Montague of Elyria, John Flowers of Sylvania Southview, near Toledo, and Mike Nicholls of Galion each had a dozen points for the North. Teammates Vince Brookins of Cleveland Collinwood had 11 and Carter Scott of Barborton had 10.

In the Class A-AA clash, Lowrie was joined by three other North players in hitting 14 points each. They were Guy Neal of Wellington, Dave Olinger of West Lafayette Ridgewood and Jim Hoops of Hamler Patrick Henry.

The South was led by Marquis Miller, the 6-foot-6 wizard from Columbus St. Charles, with a game-high 19 points. Coy Prater of Richmond Dale Southeastern had 12 and Eddie Crowe of Carlisle hit 11.

The North trailed for the first half of the first quarter, but then exploded for a 57-52 half-time edge and rolled to an 85-57 margin after three periods.

Muldowney Victorious In Drags

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Shirley Muldowney explains her sudden success—three major victories in the last 13 months of National Hot Rod Association's top fuel competition—in one word.

"Money," said the 36-year-old professional driver Sunday, rubbing her fingers together moments after she had won her second successive NHRA Springnationals.

"In 1973, I just didn't have any equipment to work with. We were the runnerup in 1975 and we didn't have anything to work with. We killed 'em last year with very, very little money."

"The money went up this year. Sponsors are hard to come by. Other forms of racing bite us, but I could care less if I ever go around circles."

Mrs. Muldowney, from Mount Clemens, Mich., the only woman in top fuel eliminator, swept by male rivals Frank Bradley, Jeg Coughlin, Don Garlits and Clive Skilton, the first Briton ever to qualify in NHRA nationals.

"Garlits was in a good mood today. He was a sweetheart—until he got beat," she said. The winningest NHRA top fuel pilot lost an engine trying to oust Shirley.

The other major winners at National Trail Raceway were a study in contrast.

Fifty-year-old Don Nicholson of Atlanta won the pro stock competition in his 1977 Mustang, his second major NHRA triumph this year.

Bob Pickett, 36, a nonwinner in two decades of nationals, stunned his Granada Hills, Calif., neighbor, Don Prudhomme, for the funny car title.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Thanks Abby For The Living Will

DER ABBY: I am a 54-year-old woman who wants to thank you for the best present I have ever received.

Because of an item in your column, I sent for The Living Will. Now I have peace of mind, knowing that if I should become terminally ill, those who love me will not have to endure the agony of watching me die slowly. (I went through 22 months of that when my husband died of cancer.)

Abby, you would be doing your readers a tremendous service by explaining The Living Will and telling them how to obtain one.

B.J. IN CONCORD

DEAR B.J.: The Living Will is simply a document that reads as follows:

To my family, my physician, my lawyer, my clergyman,

To any medical facility in whose care I happen to be,

To any individual who may be responsible for my health, welfare or affairs:

Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age—is the one certainty of life. If the time comes when I, —, can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stand as an expression of my wishes while I am still of sound mind.

If the situation should arise in which there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery, I request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or "heroic measures." I do not fear death itself as much as the indignities of deterioration, dependence and hopeless pain. I therefore ask that medication be mercifully administered to me to alleviate suffering even though this may hasten the moment of death.

This request is made after careful consideration. I hope you who care for me will feel morally bound to follow its mandate. I recognize that this appears to place a heavy responsibility upon you, but it is with the intention of relieving you of such responsibility and of placing it upon myself in accordance with my strong convictions that this statement is made.

layer of nomex, or insulated, underwear that is also fire retardant. Third is a liner that keeps moisture off the suit itself. The actual anti-exposure suit is next. This garment permits air to pass in and out of it, but as soon as it becomes wet, it seals itself, thus protecting the wearer from freezing water. The last layer of the outfit is a regular nomex fire retardant flying suit. This is worn to actually protect the exposure suit. The anti-exposure suit even comes with "booties," and the pilot is sealed into the suit with rubber cement. While it wouldn't win many fashion shows, it has proved its effectiveness. Like the ejection demonstration, fortunately the anti-exposure suit was not called into the service it was designed for.

Bob Good was the photographer for the 121st. He had the job of photographing personnel both during working hours and during recreational and sight-seeing trips. The photographs will be used in many areas, including news publications and Air Force literature.

Airman Britton is a native of Germany, and she had a chance to see her family while she was in Germany with the 121st. While her official duties were as a clerk, she proved invaluable as an interpreter for everyone. At the midway point of the unit's stay in Germany, General Harry L. Cochran Jr., the Commander of the 121st, visited the burgermeisters of Ingolstadt and Manching. Manching is a small village located directly adjacent to the Ingolstadt Air Base, much like Groveport is located to Rickenbacker AFB.

Airman Britton served as official interpreter on both visits, and she translated a letter from Mayor Tom Moody of Columbus to the mayor of Ingolstadt. The letter was presented to the German mayor in a frame, and now hangs on the wall of his office.

Sgt. Taylor was in charge of fuel supplies. After the fighters landed, it was Taylor's responsibility to see that they were fueled for the next flight.

As was stated earlier, these were the persons that we were able to talk with while they were performing their official duties. Those that we didn't reach were on duty also, and all had important functions that were crucial to the success of the operation. None of the local persons in the Guard unit were pilots, but their importance was voiced several times by the pilots. Gen. Cochran reported to newsmen in Germany with the Guard that 18 sorties, or flights, a day were planned when the Guard arrived in Germany. They were actually flying 24-28 sorties a day, and they were thrilled with the success of the operation. The extra sorties were possible because of the excellent support of the ground personnel and the diligence with which they carried out their duties.

Before launching took place, a series of events transpired. First, the pilots were given a pre-flight briefing. This briefing covered the weather they would encounter, the flight mission for that particular day, start-up and taxi procedures, and many other technical items included in the flight.

After the briefing in Operations Headquarters the pilots walked down the hallway approximately 20 feet to the equipment and life support room where they received their harnesses and helmets. Then they were taken by van out to the flight lines.

While the pilots were in briefing sessions, the crew chiefs were on the flight lines inspecting the planes and readying them for the pilots. There is one crew chief per plane. Before the pilot takes responsibility for a plane, he will first make a quick walk-around check to make sure that all is in readiness.

Then it is into the cockpit and a series of checks starts to take place that culminates some 20-25 minutes later in the wheel chocks being removed and the crew chief sending the plane down the taxi-way. Of course, this is a non-emergency procedure, and a fighter can be launched as quickly as five minutes after the pilots are scrambled.

At the far end of the taxi-way, three ground crew personnel waited for the planes. These men were known as "last chance". While the last chance crew varied from day to day, their duty always was the same; they stopped the planes and made one quick walk around check to check for fuel or hydraulic leaks on the planes.

Finally the A7s would roll onto the runway, pause for a moment as if drawing a big final breath, and then whisk down the runway and up into the crowded European skies.

The A7s and their pilots flew a myriad of missions. Their first flights were mostly orientation missions, designed to acquaint the pilots with the flying space and the various other air bases that they would be flying in the vicinity of. Approaches were flown into these bases in the event that a pilot would have to actually make an emergency landing. After the orientation missions came reconnaissance, air combat, and ground support missions. During the last days of the deployment, the A7s and pilots participated in NATO exercises with regular U.S.A.F. and Navy fighters, and German, Dutch, Norwegian, and British Air Forces. Ingolstadt Air Base was approximately two hours flying time from communist East Germany. The pilots had opportunities to fly in the buffer zone. Because of the restricted air spaces in Europe, pilots were briefed continuously using maps, charts, and proper procedures.

One aspect of the deployment that was truly beautiful were the friendships that were established between the United States and German personnel. The Germans were curious about the United States and some of our customs. Likewise, the Americans got a chance to sample German life, and the majority enjoyed it immensely.

Directly beside the Operations Headquarters building was a soccer field. Many of the younger German personnel stationed on the base were avid soccer players and they played nearly every day when they were not on duty. As more and more groups of curious 121st members gathered to watch the daily games, the Germans invited them to play. It was an amusing sight to see Americans trying to dribble the ball with their feet while the Germans did it like second nature. But after an hour or so an American football was mysteriously produced, and it was then the Germans turn to be instructed. It was equally amusing too to see the Germans attempt to throw a forward pass and have the ball squirt to the ground five yards after it was released.

Another international sport session occurred one night in an Ingolstadt bowling alley. Sgt. Ron Dillon of

162nd Person Fire Victim

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dan Barker of Southgate, Ky., has become the 162nd victim of the May 28 fire at the Beverly Hills Supper Club.

The 29-year-old Barker died Saturday at General Hospital here. He had been in critical condition since the fire at the supper club, located five miles south of Cincinnati.

His wife, Karen, 24, remains in fair condition at St. Luke Hospital.

Among those still hospitalized from the fire is Janice Popp of Latonia, Ky., who remains in critical condition.

Meanwhile, Kentucky state police have vacated their command post at the site of the fire, leaving it to the owners of the Southgate club to guard the remains.

State police had been patrolling the site since the day after the fire.

The Richard Schilling family which owns the club property has several dogs now guarding the area. The Southgate police department is providing backup assistance.

Lancaster, an avid bowler at home, decided to try his luck at a German lane. He reported that the Germans on the whole, are not very skillful at bowling. The proprietor of this establishment was quite an excellent bowler though and a friendly challenge was issued.

As the games progressed and word spread throughout the bowling alley of what was taking place, an ever increasing crowd of Germans gathered around to watch the American bowler. The final result was that the two split an equal number of games. When Dillon started to pay for his entertainment, the owner refused the money. He invited Dillon to his home to meet his family and have some wine, then drove him approximately five miles back to the airbase at the end of the very memorable evening.

The fantastic aspect of these little encounters is that each party knew very little of the other party's native language. But language proved to be no barrier in the encounters that took place.

The first Thursday that the 121st was in Germany was a national holiday—the equivalent of our Fathers' Day in the United States. One Air Guardsman, Sgt. Don (Pop) Porter from Groveport, received one of the highest honors that a German could bestow on a person. The German airman that he worked with on the Ingolstadt Air Base invited him to his home on the national holiday. At the man's home, Porter had dinner, met the gentleman's family, and stayed overnight. It doesn't seem like much to Americans but it is a very big honor to be invited to a man's home in Germany.

On the last night that the 121st was in Germany a party was held in appreciation for all that the German Air personnel had done for the unit. It is too bad that some of our world leaders could not have been at that party because they would have seen some fine examples of grass roots diplomacy. German and American personnel were enjoying good food and kegs of beer, soft drinks, a Bavarian band, and they were dancing by the hour. Finally they started exchanging uniform insignias and rank badges. And the singing, while not of high quality, was of high volume.

Gen. Cochran termed Operation Coronet Whist "a huge success." It demonstrated the readiness of the Air National Guard, along with their ability to fly overseas and set up effective operations on a foreign base, which would very likely be the situation if they were called to active duty. Future overseas deployments are now being considered for the citizen-soldiers of the Air National Guard.

Two major actions took place in the Ohio Senate this week. One took place in the Senate chamber itself, and the other occurred in the Senate Republican Caucus.

Last month, an attempt was made to open both party caucuses to the public when Senate rules were being adopted. This move was defeated by majority Democrats on a straight party-line vote. Republicans in the Senate, believing that the public's trust and confidence in their elected officials is best served by removing secrecy and suspicion from the legislative process, then decided to go ahead with plans to open their own caucus to the public.

layer of nomex, or insulated, underwear that is also fire retardant. Third is a liner that keeps moisture off the suit itself. The actual anti-exposure suit is next. This garment permits air to pass in and out of it, but as soon as it becomes wet, it seals itself, thus protecting the wearer from freezing water. The last layer of the outfit is a regular nomex fire retardant flying suit. This is worn to actually protect the exposure suit. The anti-exposure suit even comes with "booties," and the pilot is sealed into the suit with rubber cement. While it wouldn't win many fashion shows, it has proved its effectiveness. Like the ejection demonstration, fortunately the anti-exposure suit was not called into the service it was designed for.

Bob Good was the photographer for the 121st. He had the job of photographing personnel both during working hours and during recreational and sight-seeing trips. The photographs will be used in many areas, including news publications and Air Force literature.

Airman Britton is a native of Germany, and she had a chance to see her family while she was in Germany with the 121st. While her official duties were as a clerk, she proved invaluable as an interpreter for everyone. At the midway point of the unit's stay in Germany, General Harry L. Cochran Jr., the Commander of the 121st, visited the burgermeisters of Ingolstadt and Manching. Manching is a small village located directly adjacent to the Ingolstadt Air Base, much like Groveport is located to Rickenbacker AFB.

Airman Britton served as official interpreter on both visits, and she translated a letter from Mayor Tom Moody of Columbus to the mayor of Ingolstadt. The letter was presented to the German mayor in a frame, and now hangs on the wall of his office.

Sgt. Taylor was in charge of fuel supplies. After the fighters landed, it was Taylor's responsibility to see that they were fueled for the next flight.

As was stated earlier, these were the persons that we were able to talk with while they were performing their official duties. Those that we didn't reach were on duty also, and all had important functions that were crucial to the success of the operation. None of the local persons in the Guard unit were pilots, but their importance was voiced several times by the pilots. Gen. Cochran reported to newsmen in Germany with the Guard that 18 sorties, or flights, a day were planned when the Guard arrived in Germany. They were actually flying 24-28 sorties a day, and they were thrilled with the success of the operation. The extra sorties were possible because of the excellent support of the ground personnel and the diligence with which they carried out their duties.

Before launching took place, a series of events transpired. First, the pilots were given a pre-flight briefing. This briefing covered the weather they would encounter, the flight mission for that particular day, start-up and taxi procedures, and many other technical items included in the flight.

After the briefing in Operations Headquarters the pilots walked down the hallway approximately 20 feet to the equipment and life support room where they received their harnesses and helmets. Then they were taken by van out to the flight lines.

While the pilots were in briefing sessions, the crew chiefs were on the flight lines inspecting the planes and readying them for the pilots. There is one crew chief per plane. Before the pilot takes responsibility for a plane, he will first make a quick walk-around check to make sure that all is in readiness.

Then it is into the cockpit and a series of checks starts to take place that culminates some 20-25 minutes later in the wheel chocks being removed and the crew chief sending the plane down the taxi-way. Of course, this is a non-emergency procedure, and a fighter can be launched as quickly as five minutes after the pilots are scrambled.

At the far end of the taxi-way, three ground crew personnel waited for the planes. These men were known as "last chance". While the last chance crew varied from day to day, their duty always was the same; they stopped the planes and made one quick walk around check to check for fuel or hydraulic leaks on the planes.

Finally the A7s would roll onto the runway, pause for a moment as if drawing a big final breath, and then whisk down the runway and up into the crowded European skies.

The A7s and their pilots flew a myriad of missions. Their first flights were mostly orientation missions, designed to acquaint the pilots with the flying space and the various other air bases that they would be flying in the vicinity of. Approaches were flown into these bases in the event that a pilot would have to actually make an emergency landing. After the orientation missions came reconnaissance, air combat, and ground support missions. During the last days of the deployment, the A7s and pilots participated in NATO exercises with regular U.S.A.F. and Navy fighters, and German, Dutch, Norwegian, and British Air Forces. Ingolstadt Air Base was approximately two hours flying time from communist East Germany. The pilots had opportunities to fly in the buffer zone. Because of the restricted air spaces in Europe, pilots were briefed continuously using maps, charts, and proper procedures. One aspect of the deployment that was truly beautiful were the friendships that were established between the United States and German personnel. The Germans were curious about the United States and some of our customs. Likewise, the Americans got a chance to sample German life, and the majority enjoyed it immensely.

Directly beside the Operations Headquarters building was a soccer field. Many of the younger German personnel stationed on the base were avid soccer players and they played nearly every day when they were not on duty. As more and more groups of curious 121st members gathered to watch the daily games, the Germans invited them to play. It was an amusing sight to see Americans trying to dribble the ball with their feet while the Germans did it like second nature. But after an hour or so an American football was mysteriously produced, and it was then the Germans turn to be instructed. It was equally amusing too to see the Germans attempt to throw a forward pass and have the ball squirt to the ground five yards after it was released.

Another international sport session occurred one night in an Ingolstadt bowling alley. Sgt. Ron Dillon of

162nd Person Fire Victim

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dan Barker of Southgate, Ky., has become the 162nd victim of the May 28 fire at the Beverly Hills Supper Club.

The 29-year-old Barker died Saturday at General Hospital here.

He had been in critical condition since the fire at the supper club, located five miles south of Cincinnati.

His wife, Karen, 24, remains in fair condition at St. Luke Hospital.

Among those still hospitalized from the fire is Janice Popp of Latonia, Ky., who remains in critical condition.

Meanwhile, Kentucky state police have vacated their command post at the site of the fire, leaving it to the owners of the Southgate club to guard the remains.

State police had been patrolling the site since the day after the fire.

The Richard Schilling family which owns the club property has several dogs now guarding the area. The Southgate police department is providing backup assistance.

Lancaster, an avid bowler at home, decided to try his luck at a German lane. He reported that the Germans on the whole, are not very skillful at bowling. The proprietor of this establishment was quite an excellent bowler though and a friendly challenge was issued.

As the games progressed and word spread throughout the bowling alley of what was taking place, an ever increasing crowd of Germans gathered around to watch the American bowler. The final result was that the two split an equal number of games. When Dillon started to pay for his entertainment, the owner refused the money. He invited Dillon to his home to meet his family and have some wine, then drove him approximately five miles back to the airbase at the end of the very memorable evening.

Ohio Senate Report

By OAKLEY C. COLLINS
17th District Senator

Two major actions took place in the Ohio Senate this week. One took place in the Senate chamber itself, and the other occurred in the Senate Republican Caucus.

Last month, an attempt was made to open both party caucuses to the public when Senate rules were being adopted. This move was defeated by majority Democrats on a straight party-line vote. Republicans in the Senate, believing that the public's trust and confidence in their elected officials is best served by removing secrecy and suspicion from the legislative process, then decided to go ahead with plans to open their own caucus to the public.

Senator Collins believes our political and governmental institutions are suffering from a crisis in public confidence, and those of us in public life must extend ourselves to make deliberations on public business truly public.

On the Senate floor, the major news was passage of Substitute Senate Bill 222 — Collective Bargaining for Public Employees. After prolonged and heated debate, the bill passed on a strict party-line vote. Republicans were repeatedly unsuccessful in their attempts to amend the bill.

In its present form, Substitute Senate Bill 222 allows public employees to engage in collective bargaining with their employers with regard to wages, hours, terms and conditions of work and "matters of professional concern". A limited right-to-strike is provided for public employees. This right-to-strike does not apply to police, fire-fighters, corrections officers or prison guards unless their employer decides that a strike will better serve the public interest than the compulsory arbitration provisions which are found in the bill. The Ferguson Act, which declares public employee strikes to be illegal, is repealed by S.B. 222.

A five member State Employment Relations Board (SERB) is established to implement the new law. Also created are an Office of Collective Bargaining in the Governor's Office, and a Bureau of Mediation under the jurisdiction of SERB, which will assemble groups of fact-finders and arbitrators who are to carry out the impasse resolution procedures spelled out in the bill.

The legislation provides for the description of an employee organization as the exclusive representative of the unit. This agency shop provision means that public employees are not forced to join a union, but once an exclusive agent has been certified, all employees will be required to pay the same fees and dues as the union members do.

Among the many problems that led to Republican objections to this bill were: (1) the costs of future labor agreements are likely to cause severe financial problems for both state and local governmental units; (2) collective bargaining agreements will take precedence over existing state and local laws; (3) in certain situations, employers are denied the right to appeal findings of the State Employment Relations Board to the courts; (4) existing state employee benefits — pay scales, job security, retirement benefits, overtime pay, paid holidays, insurance plans, etc. — are frozen in place, and all future contracts will have to provide benefits over and above all of these benefits — which many workers in the private sector still do not have; and (5) there is no evidence that a bill of this kind will serve to reduce public employee strikes. In fact, evidence from surrounding states with similar legislation on the books suggests that such strikes actually increase after passage of this sort of law. Despite these and other objections, however, Substitute Senate Bill 222 was passed on a party-line vote of 21-12 and sent to the House for its consideration.

In other Senate Action, Amended House Bill 275, which permits children of farm families to work on their parents' farms without being subject to all provisions of child labor laws, was passed. Amended Senate Bill 264, which requires motor vehicle leasing dealers to be licensed, sets up additional requirements for the licensing of new and used motor vehicle dealers, and increases license fees for new and used motor vehicle dealers, distributors, auction owners, and salesmen, was also given Senate approval.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth Sign.

FOR TUESDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Pep up the "difficult" areas; aim for surer efficiency; study others' methods to note where they could apply to your situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Old fashioned common sense will be needed in making decisions. Self-reliance, plus a certain amount of flexibility, will also boost your stock.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Where you can step up impetus and momentum of activity, don't hesitate. There's much to accomplish now. Just one admonition: Don't overlook details.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): If not overanxious, you can make extraordinary gains now. Careful thought and consideration of past procedures will give you direction.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Strongly benefic solar influences should help you put over worthwhile plans now. Some changes may have to be made, but they will prove profitable in the long run.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): A good time to develop a dormant talent, to repeat an old strategy when others fail. Don't yield to frustration in ANY situation. Keep your eyes on a golden future.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): You may face some complex situations now, some unexpected obstacles, so anticipate them - but with composure and preparedness, not anxiety. You CAN cope.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22): Differences of opinion need not result in rifts. Get together with those concerned and calmly iron things out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Don't negate past fine efforts through carelessness. Attend to all affairs in a quite, dispassionate manner. Personal relationships should prove rewarding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Look to others for suggestions - help, too. Don't try too much by yourself or reject ideas summarily, for the sake of delight in personal achievement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): There's a tendency now to take off on tangents or useless ventures unless you keep your mind on immediate objectives. Press for efficiency.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Delay may seem the rule rather than the exception. Work to eliminate the causes of defeat and disappointment before the effects set in.

YOU BORN TODAY are imaginative, brilliant of intellect and dexterous of hand. Your versatility and love of life are outstanding, but you must learn to curb tendencies toward hypersensitivity and restlessness. You are idealistic and always aim high, but you're not a daydreamer. In fact, you've chosen the career which appeals to you most, will spare no effort to reach the top - which you usually do, since you are a realist and your goals are always within the realm of possibility. Fields in which you could attain your greatest successes: writing, theatrical direction, music, journalism (as reporter or editor).

ACCIDENT SCENE — Emergency squadsmen prepare to remove Edith I. McCloud, 35, 1227 S. Pickaway St., from her car following a 9:19 Saturday morning accident.

The mishap was the first of three injury accidents investigated by Circleville Police over the weekend. None of the injuries were listed as serious.

City Police Check 3 Accidents

Circleville Police investigated three injury accidents over the weekend.

The first occurred at 9:19 a.m. Saturday on N. Court St., approximately 90 feet north of High St.

According to the report, Edith I. McCloud, 35, 1227 S. Pickaway St., was northbound on Court St., and had stopped in traffic to make a left turn into Circleville Oil.

A southbound car stopped to let Ms. McCloud make her turn, and as she was in the middle of the turn, another southbound car driven by Leo Leslie Hughes, 56, 118 Rosewood Ave., struck the McCloud auto. Both vehicles continued for 20 feet after impact.

Ms. McCloud and a passenger in the Hughes auto, Wilma B. Hughes, 50, 118 Rosewood Ave., were taken to Berger Hospital by the Circleville Emergency Medical Squad, where they were treated for minor injuries and released.

Ptl. Ron Smith cited Ms. McCloud for failure to yield the right of way.

The second accident occurred at 4 p.m. Saturday on N. Court St. at the intersection with Recreation Ave.

The report states that cars driven by Franklin Mace, 31, 627 Garden Parkway, and Donald A. Cordle, 26, 120

Stihl Ave., were northbound on Court St., and had stopped behind a car that was waiting to make a left turn into Ted Lewis Park.

Another car, also northbound on Court St., driven by Paul D. Tatman, 27, Ashville, failed to see the vehicles stopped in the street, and the Tatman auto struck the Cordle auto, in turn striking the Mace auto. Cordle was treated for a minor injury.

Ptl. Alan Hawks cited Tatman for failing to maintain assured clear distance ahead.

The third accident of the weekend occurred at 8:38 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of W. Water St. and N. Scioto St. and involved a child and his bicycle.

According to the report, Sally A. Foll, 20, 206 W. Main St., was eastbound on W. Water St., and had stopped for the stop sign at the intersection of N. Scioto St.

As she was stopped at the stop sign, Ronnie L. Stevens, 5, of 401½ N. Scioto St., was northbound on Scioto St. and approached the intersection too rapidly to stop, and struck Ms. Foll's van in the side. After impact, the child slid underneath the van.

Circleville Emergency Medical

Squadsmen took the child to Berger Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Death Of Hostages Still Being Probed

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — One of two hostages who died when Dutch commandos stormed a besieged train in northern Holland was killed by a South Moluccan terrorist, according to one of the surviving captives.

The report of the shooting came from Saskia Sein, 48, and was relayed by telephone by her husband, who told the Associated Press:

"My wife did not actually see or hear the terrorists shooting. She was in a first-class compartment in that section of the train where there were no hijackers.

"However, when she came to the psychiatric reception ward, some other released hostages told us that the 40-year-old man was shot by one terrorist. We were not sure about who shot the 19-year-old girl."

The two hostages killed were J.M.O. Monsjou, 19, and M. Van Baarsel, 40. Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber said today it was believed that Miss Monsjou was shot by a terrorist who survived the attack but who was himself shot in the chest and stomach.

"We think he shot her, but ... we can only be sure when we have the report of the autopsy on the two hostages killed."

Dutch troops stormed the Bovensmilde elementary school before dawn Saturday and freed 53 hostages who had been held for 20 days. Two other hostages and six of the 13 South Moluccans were killed on the train, and one of the terrorists was wounded seriously. Nine of the surviving hostages were also hospitalized, but all were reported in good condition.

The four teachers held hostage in the school could have escaped several times, one of them told a news conference Sunday. But she said they feared the other group of terrorists aboard the stranded commuter train would harm some of their captives in retaliation.

"On one occasion, the Moluccans all fell asleep, and we had a key with which we could have gotten out of the building," said 35-year-old Sjaan Abbink. "But at that time, they still had a direct telephone line to the Moluccans on the train and we feared for the lives of the hostages on the train."

Storms End In Mid-U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thunderstorms carrying gusty winds, hail and heavy rain over the south and central Great Plains states diminished overnight, with a few scattered storms roaming over parts of Texas, Colorado, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Kansas.

Southeastern Nebraska endured the severe storms that occurred after sunset, with hail the size of golf balls reported in Bladen. Flash floods were reported in Rapid City, S.D., with three cars in the parking lot of the Reptile Gardens tourist attraction reported washed some distance. No other damage was reported but pea-sized hail that accumulated to 1½ feet fell.

Cloudy or partly cloudy skies dominated the nation at sunrise, with mostly clear skies over Virginia and Alabama in the east and western Texas, eastern Colorado and the south-west desert regions.

Predawn temperatures across the nation ranged from 40 degrees at Sawyer Air Force Base in Marquette, Mich., to 83 in Blythe and Needles, Calif., and in Phoenix.

Memphis, Tenn., reported a reading of 82 degrees after midnight.

Cyanide Possible Killer In Blaze

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Cyanide may have been in the black smoke of the Memorial Day weekend fire at the Beverly Hills Supper Club which has claimed 162 lives, according to a copyrighted story in The Courier-Journal and Times.

The Louisville newspapers said in a combined Sunday edition that tests performed for by a Cincinnati laboratory showed cyanides were present in smoke produced by burning foam-rubber padding in chairs identical to those at the Southgate, Ky., nightclub.

The analysis was made on material taken from a chair identical to those in the Zebra Room, the newspaper said. Officials have said the May 28 fire started in the Zebra Room.

The newspaper said its tests were conducted at Spectra Group Chemical Laboratory in Cincinnati.

"The copious black smoke means there wasn't enough oxygen to oxidize everything thoroughly," said Spectra chemist Joe Todd, "and it is very possible that hydrogen cyanide would be produced."

Another test, conducted in connection with the state's investigation of the fire, also revealed cyanide was present in the same material during combustion, the newspaper said. The conductor of the test asked not to be named, it added.

Campbell County Coroner Fred G. Stine has said that most of the victims apparently died of smoke inhalation, specifically carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide is formed when wood or paper burn.

Stine, who has been criticized for not ordering full autopsies and blood tests for all the victims, has said identifying and returning bodies to the victims' families was more important.

Stine and fire officials have said no blood tests were requested until most of the victims' bodies were returned to their families.

However, a pathologist hired by an attorney who has filed two multimillion dollar lawsuits on behalf of victims of the fire also has questioned Stine's assessment.

Dr. Cyril Wecht, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, coroner, said Stine's view "that all the victims died of carbon monoxide poisoning is like saying a person died from burns just because his body is burned."

Man Held In Slayings

LEBANON, Ind. (AP) — Bryan E. Haughton was held here Sunday in connection with the shooting deaths of two cousins, Boone County authorities said.

Preliminary charges of firstdegree murder were lodged against Haughton, 21, of Lebanon, in the deaths late Saturday of Melvin Childress, 23, Advance, Ind., and Timothy Lee Childress, 16, Cincinnati.

Coroner P.L. Myers said detectives think a domestic argument led to the shootings, which occurred as the victims stood next to their car along Indiana 32, at an entrance ramp to Interstate 65. Three women were in the car at the time, detectives said.

A spokesman for the Boone County prosecutor's office said the case would be turned over to the grand jury.

Stark County Director Sought

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — An executive director is expected to be named within a week to head a new Stark County agency designed to fight poverty, County Commissioner Virgil Musser says.

The person will direct the 29 staff members of the Stark County Community Action and Planning Agency, which is replacing the old Human Development Council.

Musser said the last two of four applicants will be interviewed before a hiring decision is made.

ACCIDENT SCENE — Emergency squadmen prepare to remove Edith I. McCloud, 35, 1227 S. Pickaway St., from her car following a 9:19 Saturday morning accident.

The mishap was the first of three injury accidents investigated by Circleville Police over the weekend. None of the injuries were listed as serious.

City Police Check 3 Accidents

Circleville Police investigated three injury accidents over the weekend.

The first occurred at 9:19 a.m. Saturday on N. Court St., approximately 90 feet north of High St.

According to the report, Edith I. McCloud, 35, 1227 S. Pickaway St., was northbound on Court St., and had stopped in traffic to make a left turn into Circleville Oil.

A southbound car stopped to let Ms. McCloud make her turn, and as she was in the middle of the turn, another southbound car driven by Leo Leslie Hughes, 56, 118 Rosewood Ave., struck the McCloud auto. Both vehicles continued for 20 feet after impact.

Ms. McCloud and a passenger in the Hughes auto, Wilma B. Hughes, 50, 118 Rosewood Ave., were taken to Berger Hospital by the Circleville Emergency Medical Squad, where they were treated for minor injuries and released.

Ptl. Ron Smith cited Ms. McCloud for failure to yield the right of way.

The second accident occurred at 4 p.m. Saturday on N. Court St. at the intersection with Recreation Ave.

The report states that cars driven by Franklin Mace, 31, 627 Garden Parkway, and Donald A. Cordle, 26, 120

Stihl Ave., were northbound on Court St., and had stopped behind a car that was waiting to make a left turn into Ted Lewis Park.

Another car, also northbound on Court St., driven by Paul D. Tatman, 27, Ashville, failed to see the vehicles stopped in the street, and the Tatman auto struck the Cordle auto, in turn striking the Mace auto. Cordle was treated for a minor injury.

Ptl. Alan Hawks cited Tatman for failing to maintain assured clear distance ahead.

The third accident of the weekend occurred at 8:38 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of W. Water St. and N. Scioto St. and involved a child and his bicycle.

According to the report, Sally A. Foll, 20, 206 W. Main St., was eastbound on W. Water St., and had stopped for the stop sign at the intersection of N. Scioto St.

As she was stopped at the stop sign, Ronnie L. Stevens, 5, of 401½ N. Scioto St., was northbound on Scioto St. and approached the intersection too rapidly to stop, and struck Ms. Foll's van in the side. After impact, the child slid underneath the van.

Circleville Emergency Medical

Squadmen took the child to Berger Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Death Of Hostages Still Being Probed

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — One of two hostages who died when Dutch commandos stormed a besieged train in northern Holland was killed by a South Moluccan terrorist, according to one of the surviving captives.

The report of the shooting came from Saskia Sein, 48, and was relayed by telephone by her husband, who told the Associated Press:

"My wife did not actually see or hear the terrorists shooting. She was in a first-class compartment in that section of the train where there were no hijackers.

"However, when she came to the psychiatric reception ward, some other released hostages told us that the 40-year-old man was shot by one terrorist. We were not sure about who shot the 19-year-old girl."

The two hostages killed were J.M.O. Monsjou, 19, and M. Van Baarsel, 40. Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber said today it was believed that Miss Monsjou was shot by a terrorist who survived the attack but who was himself shot in the chest and stomach.

"We think he shot her, but ... we can only be sure when we have the report of the autopsy on the two hostages killed."

Dutch troops stormed the Bovensmilde elementary school before dawn Saturday and freed 53 hostages who had been held for 20 days. Two other hostages and six of the 13 South Moluccans were killed on the train, and one of the terrorists was wounded seriously. Nine of the surviving hostages were also hospitalized, but all were reported in good condition.

The four teachers held hostage in the school could have escaped several times, one of them told a news conference Sunday. But she said they feared the other group of terrorists aboard the stranded commuter train would harm some of their captives in retaliation.

"On one occasion, the Moluccans all fell asleep, and we had a key with which we could have gotten out of the building," said 35-year-old Sjaan Abbink. "But at that time, they still had a direct telephone line to the Moluccans on the train and we feared for the lives of the hostages on the train."

Storms End In Mid-U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Thunderstorms carrying gusty winds, hail and heavy rain over the south and central Great Plains states diminished overnight, with a few scattered storms roaming over parts of Texas, Colorado, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Kansas.

Southeastern Nebraska endured the severe storms that occurred after sunset, with hail the size of golf balls reported in Bladen. Flash floods were reported in Rapid City, S.D., with three cars in the parking lot of the Reptile Gardens tourist attraction reported washed some distance. No other damage was reported but pea-sized hail that accumulated to 1½ feet fell.

Cloudy or partly cloudy skies dominated the nation at sunrise, with mostly clear skies over Virginia and Alabama in the east and western Texas, eastern Colorado and the southwest desert regions.

Predawn temperatures across the nation ranged from 40 degrees at Sawyer Air Force Base in Marquette, Mich., to 83 in Blythe and Needles, Calif., and in Phoenix.

Memphis, Tenn., reported a reading of 82 degrees after midnight.

Cyanide Possible Killer In Blaze

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Cyanide may have been in the black smoke of the Memorial Day weekend fire at the Beverly Hills Supper Club which has claimed 162 lives, according to a copyrighted story in The Courier-Journal and Times.

The Louisville newspapers said in a combined Sunday edition that tests performed for by a Cincinnati laboratory showed cyanides were present in smoke produced by burning foam-rubber padding in chairs identical to those at the Southgate, Ky., nightclub.

The analysis was made on material taken from a chair identical to those in the Zebra Room, the newspaper said. Officials have said the May 28 fire started in the Zebra Room.

The newspaper said its tests were conducted at Spectra Group Chemical Laboratory in Cincinnati.

"The copious black smoke means there wasn't enough oxygen to oxidize everything thoroughly," said Spectra chemist Joe Todd, "and it is very possible that hydrogen cyanide would be produced."

Another test, conducted in connection with the state's investigation of the fire, also revealed cyanide was present in the same material during combustion, the newspaper said. The conductor of the test asked not to be named, it added.

Campbell County Coroner Fred G. Stine has said that most of the victims apparently died of smoke inhalation, specifically carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide is formed when wood or paper burn.

Stine, who has been criticized for not ordering full autopsies and blood tests for all the victims, has said identifying and returning bodies to the victims' families was more important.

Stine and fire officials have said no blood tests were requested until most of the victims' bodies were returned to their families.

However, a pathologist hired by an attorney who has filed two multimillion dollar lawsuits on behalf of victims of the fire also has questioned Stine's assessment.

Dr. Cyril Wecht, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, coroner, said Stine's view "that all the victims died of carbon monoxide poisoning is like saying a person died from burns just because his body is burned."

Man Held In Slayings

LEBANON, Ind. (AP) — Bryan E. Haughton was held here Sunday in connection with the shooting deaths of two cousins, Boone County authorities said.

Preliminary charges of first-degree murder were lodged against Haughton, 21, of Lebanon, in the deaths late Saturday of Melvin Childress, 23, Advance, Ind., and Timothy Lee Childress, 16, Cincinnati.

Coroner P.L. Myers said detectives think a domestic argument led to the shootings, which occurred as the victims stood next to their car along Indiana 32, at an entrance ramp to Interstate 65. Three women were in the car at the time, detectives said.

A spokesman for the Boone County prosecutor's office said the case would be turned over to the grand jury.

Stark County Director Sought

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — An executive director is expected to be named within a week to head a new Stark County agency designed to fight poverty, County Commissioner Virgil Musser says.

The person will direct the 29 staff members of the Stark County Community Action and Planning Agency, which is replacing the old Human Development Council.

Musser said the last two of four applicants will be interviewed before a hiring decision is made.

AT KROGER, WE PROTECT
EGG QUALITY
FOR YOU..

All Kroger eggs are U.S. Department of Agriculture-graded for quality when we buy them. Then we hire inspectors to re-check eggs right in our stores to make sure that you — our customers — are getting the same high quality in the eggs you buy from us. Kroger Eggs are Grade A when we buy them...Grade A when you buy them from Kroger.

The secret is constant refrigeration. Proper refrigeration is the most important factor in maintaining egg quality, so you, too, will want to rush eggs to your refrigerator as quickly as possible. And when the weather warms up, don't let them sit in your car while you run errands.

Even when prices go up, eggs are a bargain buy. And they're cheaper than most other sources of high-quality protein, also providing many other vitamins and minerals. For dieters, a large egg contains only about 80 calories!

When is a different size egg a better buy? Federal standards specify the total weight of a dozen eggs for a certain size (e.g., Large equals 24-oz.). There's about 10% difference between sizes... so if the price difference is more than 10%, buy the next size and save!

We hear you and we're trying to help!
